TO PROSECUTE MEMBER OF HOUSE FOR SELLING JOBS

Department of Justice Preparing Criminal Action Against Representative Accused of Taking Money for Appointments.

MEMBER INVOLVED IN CASE NOT NAMED

Special Attorney Likely to Be Selected — Irregularities Alleged in District of Harry E. Rowbottom — Statement by Watson.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 6.—The Department of Justice prepared to day to institute criminal action against the Indiana member of Congress charged by the Postoffice Department with accepting money from four Postmasters to obtain their appointments. Justice officials declined to name the representative.

The postmasterships concerned all were in the district of Indiana now represented by Harry E. Rowbottom, Republican, who was defeated for re-election in November. No formal action has yet been initiated.

A special prosecuting attorney probably will be sent from Washington to conduct the case. No announcement was made, but it was pointed out at the Justice Department that, since the case involved political angles, and since George R. Jeffrey, United States Attorney at Indianapolis, is in a sense a political appointee, he could be relieved of embarrassment by having the case taken out of his hands. The four Postmasters have been dismissed.

Penalties for Offense.

There are two statutes under which action might be instituted. Under one, at least, the giver as well as the receiver of bribes might be open to prosecution. One provides a maximum penalty of a year in jail and $1,000 fine. The other provides two years in jail and $10,000 fine.

Rowbottom was not named in the Postoffice Department announcement of the dismissals yesterday, but two of the dismissed persons said they had contributed to Rowbottom's campaign fund and another was active for him in the last election, when he was defeated by a Democrat.

The discharged Postmasters are: Otto A. Weilbrenner, Mount Vernon; William E. Davison, Petersville; McKinley Ayres, Chisney, and Mrs. Helen Roetzel, Bonnville. A rural carrier, Ross Wibeler of Dale, also was suspended.

Senators Instigated Inquiry.

The investigation which ended in the dismissals was instigated by Indiana's two Republican Senators, Watson and Robinson. Assistant Postmaster-General Coleman said he reported gossip prevalent in Indiana regarding payments of money in exchange for appointments.

The Postoffice Department statement narrated the events leading up to the dismissal as follows:

"About 19 days ago Senators Watson and Robinson of Indiana brought to the attention of the Postoffice Department gossip prevalent in Indiana to the effect that certain Postmasters and other applicants for positions had been paying and causing to be paid various sums of money to a Congressman to obtain the appointments desired.

"A searching investigation was immediately inaugurated by the inspection division, resulting in evidence conclusive in its character that these Postmasters were dismissed today (Monday)."

Watson's Statement.

"Various people of standing presented documentary evidence to Senator Watson and me," said Watson. "We took this to the Postmaster-General and asked that he make a thorough investigation. This investigation was made. The evidence gathered by the inspection division was conclusive in its character that these Postmasters were dismissed today (Monday)."

Watson's Statement.

"Various people of standing presented documentary evidence to Senator Watson and me," said Watson. "We took this to the Postmaster-General and asked that he make a thorough investigation. This investigation was made. The evidence gathered by the inspection division was conclusive in its character that these Postmasters were dismissed today (Monday)."

"I told him there was no other course and I further asked that the department take complete charge of the affair and go so far as to name the acting postmasters on its own responsibility. It is all very unfortunate and Senator Robinson and I want the whole affair handled by the regular Government officers."

LUCAS GRILLED AT HEARING TELLS OF SECRET CAMPAIGN

Examination by Senators Discloses Wide Use of Barroom Cartoon Against Dry Candidates. WHERE "SPECIAL" G. O. P. MONEY WENT Party Director Sticks to Story He Personally Used $4000 Loan but Treasurer Nutt Has Paid It.

By PAUL Y. ANDERSON, A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 6.—The Senate Committee today resumed its investigation of the circumstances under which Robert E. Lucas, executive director of the Republican National Committee, secretly undertook to defeat certain candidates for Congress in the last election by circulating Ku Klux Klan propaganda in their states, and succeeded in unearthing the following facts:

The $4000 loan obtained by Lucas to pay for the Klan literature has been paid off during the last few days by Joseph R. Nutt, Cleveland banker and power magnate, who is National Treasurer of the Republican party.

That, although Lucas maintained he was actuated by devotion to the prohibition cause, most of the candidates against whom the literature was used, including Senator Norris (Rep.), Nebraska; Senator Walsh (Dem., Montana); Senator-elect Costigan (Dem., Colorado); Senator-elect Logan (Dem., Kentucky); Senator-elect Neely (Dem., West Virginia), and Senator-elect Balliet (Dem., North Carolina), are, as a matter of fact, pronounced dry.

Purely "Personal" Enterprise. Notwithstanding Lucas has contended that he was a purely "personal" enterprise, unsupported by the Republican organization, the Republican National Committee would have been responsible for the cost of the literature if Lucas had been unable to raise the money elsewhere.

That the $50,000 "special account" opened by Treasurer Nutt in the Commercial National Bank of this city, two weeks before the last election, was to be used in behalf of Republican congressional candidates who were reported to be in distress.

That $6500 of this money was sent by Lucas to his friend and former colleague, Republican National Committeeman Matt Chilton of Kentucky, and Chilton has reported he spent it in behalf of various congressional candidates, but none of these candidates reported having received any of it.

$6000 to Dr. Clements.

That $6000 of the fund was sent to Dr. E. B. Clements of Mis- souri to be used in behalf of Republi- can candidates for the House of Representatives in the Fourth, Seventh, Thirteenth and Four- teenth congressional districts.

That the principal item of the campaign literature sent out by Lucas was the "barroom cartoon," first employed in 1928 against Gov. Smith, and that more than $6000 copies were shipped to press and printing establish- ments in 10 different states during the last campaign, with instructions telling them how to obtain additional copies at low rates from the plant of the Fellowship Forum, generally regarded as the organ of the klan.

It was to the plant of the Fellowship Forum that Lucas went to have the literature printed, and he spent an uncomfortable hour on the witness stand this morning describ- ing the circumstances.

Wagner as Cross-Examiner.

Despite Lucas' recent acrimonious attacks on the committee, Chairman Nye treated him kindly, but Senator Wagner (Dem.), a former member of the New York Supreme Court and a skillful cross-examiner, asked the witness wrong-side out.

Lucas announced that a number of "prominent Republicans" had offered to pay off the $4000 loan contracted by him in paying for the literature but the only one he mentioned was Marshall Bullitt of Seattle, Wash. He said he would prefer to withhold the names of the others to "save them from being linked up with the power trust in the headlines."

"I am curious to know whether these 'prominent' gentlemen approved of your methods—that is, in concealing your identity and in sending out this scurrilous literature," Wagner remarked. "I didn't discuss it with them," Lucas replied. "They simply offered to pay off the note for me."

"I didn't exactly conceal my identity, but I wasn't advertising what I was doing, if that is what you mean," he added. "As to whether the literature was scurrilous, that is a question of interpretation."

"If you don't think it was scurrilous, I won't argue with you," said Wagner. "You admit that this was the identical barroom cartoon which was sent through the South- ern States in the 1928 campaign?"

Lucas said he didn't know about that.

Wagner directed his questions to the so-called "facsimile" letter, 50,000 copies of which Lucas sent to Nebraska in the recent campaign for the purpose of defeating the

RED CROSS HAS SPENT $850,000 IN DROUGHT RELIEF

John Barton Payne, Organization Head, Tells Senators of $4,500,000 Emergency Fund.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 6.—The Red Cross has an emergency fund of $4,500,000 with which to administer relief to drought sufferers throughout the winter. This the Senate Appropriations Committee learned today from Chairman Payne of the organization. He said $429,965 had already been spent. If its funds are exhausted, he said, the Red Cross will appeal to the American people. He was the first witness in the committee's inquiry into relief measures.

Judge Payne told the Senators clothing and food had been given to 49,693 families, about 250,000 individuals in 17 states at a cost, to Dec. 31, of $520,602, in addition to the distribution of postage and other aid at a cost of $325,182.

He was called after administration spokesmen had opposed Government food loans to farmers of the drought area on the ground the Red Cross was capable of meeting adequately the present situation. The Red Cross program is being financed through local donations of cash and supplies supplemented by grants from the disaster relief of the national organization.

Meanwhile, House Republican leaders were trying to send the $45,000,000 drought loan bill to conference to eliminate the Senate amendment adding $15,000,000 for food loans. Unanimous consent was necessary to bring this to a vote. Representative La Guardia (Rep., New York) objected; consequently special right of way must be obtained from the Rules Committee for a vote on the proposition to-morrow or Thursday.

La Guardia objected because Democratic Leader Garner would not agree on the floor that no point of order would be made against an amendment to make the food loan universal in application.

Representative Aswell, Louisiana, ranking Democrat on the Agriculture Committee, who led the fight for food loans in the House, said:

"Secretary Hyde and the Red Cross say they can handle the situation, but I keep getting letters from people starving in drouth areas of Louisiana."

Payne denied reports of a food riot at England, Ark., last Saturday, and related that officers of the organization reported to him that 40 men "with some excitement" came into England. He said these men were fed.

"On the same day," said Judge Payne, "as quickly as we are situated, one of our children at England fed 500 other people." The amount borrowed by Lucas:

"Was not there a question as to Lucas' right to give the National Committee account as collateral for a personal loan?" Wagner asked. "That was in my mind," Cooper said.

"Why wasn't the question raised when Lucas made the loan?" to the New Yorker pursued. "We tried to get all the security we could," Cooper replied. "Lucas signed the authority to pledge the special account and he had full authority from Mr. Nutt to use that account."

"Wasn't Advertising It." "You didn't want the public to know that you were indulging in this sort of a campaign?" "I wasn't advertising it."

"Mr. Lucas, wasn't it understood from the beginning that you were to be reimbursed for this expenditure?" "It was not. It was my own contribution."

"Have you always been so patriotic?" inquired the New Yorker. "I have always given money to Republi- can campaigns."

Chairman Nye said he could understand why Lucas would not want to connect the Republican National Committee with an effort to defeat a Republican Senatorial nominee (Norris), but he asked why, if Lucas considered it proper to circulate the cartoon in other states, he did not charge the cost to the Republican organization.

"Well, it was dry propaganda to be used in places where the fight was over prohibition, and the party didn't want to be mixed up in that side of the fight," Lucas replied.

"Then this affair becomes more bewildering every minute," ex- claimed Wagner.

"Lucas maintained his composition fairly well under the circum- stances," explained that he classified as "wet" all candidates who had supported Gov. Smith in 1928. That was the way he applied it.

Most of the witnesses de- manded to know how Lucas could advance prohibition as the explanation of his activity in the Senate. The answer was an ardent wet. Galeson, an ardent wet, and the Democrat, Walsh, an ardent dry. The squirming Re- publican chieftain finally said he believed Walsh was "insincere" in his support of prohibition.

"Then let me say that you have achieved a unique distinction," Wagner observed. "So far as I know, you are the first man who has ever charged Senator Walsh with insincerity. I believe it is the first time on record."

Nutt, who appears alternately in the roles of power magnate, financial adviser to the Van Sweringens and treasurer and "angel" of the Republican party (as a result of which he is popularly known in Washington as "Dough Nutt"), was in the committee room throughout the hearing, and gave no indication that he was enjoying himself. He will be called to the stand to-morrow.

Testimony that the $4000 loan to Lucas had been paid was given by Wade H. Cooper, president of the Commercial National Bank.

Cooper was asked for all checks drawn on the special account, but he said all had been returned with the monthly statements, on Oct. 31 and Nov. 30.

He produced a ledger sheet, however, showing $32,000 had been drawn, all before election day.

A notation signed "M. F. S." (assistant cashier), was on the ledger sheet, saying "$4000 for call- ing for loan." This was the amount borrowed by Lucas.

"Was not there a question as to Lucas' right to give the National Committee account as collateral for a personal loan?" Wagner asked. "That was in my mind," Cooper said.

WIFE FINDS HUSBAND HAS MARRIED AGAIN

Mrs. J. M. Matthews After Investigating Absence Threatens Bigamy Charge.

After a personal investigation which convinced her that her husband had married a second time without the formality of divorce, Mrs. John M. Matthews, 3731A Lee avenue, yesterday led policemen to 3110 Hampton avenue, where her husband, 31 years old, a maintenance man, was found living with his bride of four days.

Matthews gave $2500 bond. He admitted, police say, that he married Miss Myrtle Donjon, 25, at Evansville, Ill., last Friday, and had established residence in the Hampton avenue address, the home of Mrs. Mamie Schmedeke, a sister of the second Mrs. Matthews.

The bride told officers she knew Matthews had been married previously, but thought he had been divorced. She said she would not prosecute the bigamist.

The first Mrs. Matthews declared she would apply for a bigamy warrant. She said she married Matthews in 1926, their marital life being uneventful until two months ago, when he began to absent himself from home at night, explaining that he had to work overtime. An investigation led to the discovery that Matthews had married Miss Donjon.

ST. LOUIS POST-DISPATCH VERDICT OF HOMICIDE IN LOMBARDI KILLING

BANK RETIRES THREE ON INSURANCE PLAN

Police Testify at Inquest They Are Without Eye-Witnesses of Attack on Gangster.

A verdict of homicide at the hands of persons unknown to the jury was returned today at an inquest in the case of William Lombardo, 19-year-old Sicilian gangster, who was shot and wounded fatally Dec. 26, last, in front of his home at 1511 Carr street. Lombardo died at Missouri Baptist Hospital three days later, maintaining silence about the identity of his assassin.

Police testified at the inquest they had obtained no eye-witnesses of the shooting, which is thought to have been done by two or three men in an automobile who trailed Lombardo to his home.

The police ruled the shooting ascribes its motive as a hold-up. Sixteen men were arrested in a round-up after the shooting. All were released but two, who are out on bond, while police are seeking a third for investigation.

Lombardo was classed by police as a gunman and whisky runner, and had been picked up by police more than 50 times. He was known to be an associate of narcotics wholesalers and Sicilian extortionists.

Two Mercantile - Commerce Vice Presidents, Woman Savings Manager Affected.

William B. Cowen and Warren M. Chandler, vice presidents of the Mercantile-Commerce Bank and Trust Co., and Mrs. L. D. Sutler, manager of the savings department of the same institution, will retire next Monday, on an insurance plan which provides retirement incomes for officers and employees of the bank.

Cowen is 69 years old, and lives at 5944 West Cabanne place. He entered the service of the Bank of Commerce in October, 1878, and in 1908 became a vice president and director of the National Bank of Commerce. He has continued as a vice president since the merger with the Mercantile Trust Co. in 1929 to form the present institution. He will remain on the board of directors.

Chandler is 65 years old, and has been in the service of the Bank of Commerce and the Mercantile-Commerce since 1881, becoming a vice president of the National Bank of Commerce in 1919. He lives at 415 Clara avenue.

Mrs. Sutler was first employed in 1901 by the Mercantile Trust Co. as secretary to Festus J. Wade, president. In December, 1915, she was transferred to the savings department of which she became manager, being one of the first women in the United States to be made a bank officer. She lives at 4405 West Pine boulevard.

In a statement announcing the retirement of the three officers, George W. Wilson, chairman of the board, and John G. Lonsdale, president of the bank, today told of the retirement insurance system. It is carried out by two insurance companies, to whom the payments of employees and the bank's contributions to the retirement fund are paid. In 1938, the employees paid $54,126, an average of $106.91 each, while the bank contributed $171,162, or $323 per employee.

The plan provides for retirement at the age of 65, with incomes based on years of service and salary. It was stated, as to Mrs. Sutler, that she lacks several years of the age qualification, but sought an earlier retirement in order to travel.

Twenty-two persons were retired in 1938, and received aggregate benefits of $28,150. There were two deaths in the year, and the families of these employees received $6700. Twenty-eight employees who were kept from work by illness received a total of $2819. The payments are made by the insurance companies.

BEHIND MURDER OF TWO

Los Angeles Police Doubt Mus-

calin's Story He Killed Wife and Another Man to Protect Home.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Jan. 6.—

While Frank Hugo, vaudeville musician, declares he shot and killed his wife, Rina, and Louis White,

a friend of the family," because he found them together in his home, police say the killing was a premeditated crime growing out of Hugo's alleged liquor-running business.

Police Capt. William J. Bright

said he had learned Hugo wanted

White out of the way because

White went to police a few days ago and gave information at the same time asking for protection from Hugo.

Bright said there were several discrepancies in Hugo's story and in the statement of John Duca,

Hugo's nephew, who also is held.

Police said about three weeks ago liquor valued at $35,000 was confiscated at Hugo's home.

Mrs. Hugo was the mother of a boy, 4 years old, and a girl, 7.

NEEDY SATISFIED

AT ENGLAND, ARK.

Red Cross Arranges to Care for Families Affected by the Drought.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

ENGLAND, Ark., Jan. 6.—A measure of confidence returned to England today following a conference of the local Red Cross committee and a field representative of the midwest area to insure efficient distribution of food to the needy
so long as the need exists.

No trace remained of the crisis which threatened Saturday when about 300 tenants and share-croppers invaded the town, and, without disorder but with ominous determination, told authorities they were going to have food if they had to raid the stores and live on it.

Procedure followed by the Red Cross committee in this community and in dozens of others, was left unchanged by yesterday's confabgence except for redoubled precautions against delays. Administration will continue to be divided over two-week periods.

Detailed provisions were made for all the families, which the local committee expected to apply in the next two weeks, and assurance was given that similar provision would be made for each two weeks while the emergency continues.
About 100 heads of families yesterday lined up at City Hall, satisfied the committee of definite need, and obtained orders for rations at the stores. The committee announced the total to date was 650 families. The rations are meager, but were declared satisfactory to supplement what little the applicants have, which frequently consists only of turnips planted in the Red Cross fall seed campaign.

Experts engaged in drought relief confirm that England is only an example of many communities in similar plight. Crises similarly relieved by prompt action have been reported elsewhere. Bread lines or soup kitchens have appeared in at least three farming towns.
Albert Evans, assistant national director of the Red Cross in charge of drought relief expects the need to increase considerably this month and continue until the first or middle of March. Planters in the rich section about England, however,
gave some indication that the circumstances might improve earlier if farm credit were restored.

Nearly all of them have been unable this year to "furnish" tenants and share-croppers through the fear that such an customary action because they "don't know where the money is coming from"
to finance this year's crop. Several of them said yesterday that the moment they can obtain credit they will be able to begin and "furnish" hundreds of families.

Senator Caraway's $15,000,000 amendment for food loans is being watched here with intense interest.

RED CROSS AIDING 27,000 FAMILIES IN DROUGHT AREA

Number of Needy Constantly Growing, Especially in Arkansas, Since Tabulation on Dec. 31.

Last summer's drought wrought a major disaster which is only now beginning to manifest its effect fully, in the belief of officials of the Red Cross, who are administering relief to thousands of families in the Mississippi Valley. Months before food riots in Arkansas focused public attention on the situation, the Red Cross, according to Albert Evans, assistant national director of disaster relief, recognized that a catastrophe was on hand comparable only to the flood of 1927, which had been ranked by the Red Cross as the greatest peacetime disaster with which it had been called upon to cope.

The Red Cross decided to employ its $5,000,000 disaster reserve fund in the emergency, setting aside its established policy of not attempting to extend relief through its national organization in strikes, business depressions and crop failures.

By Dec. 31 the Midwestern Branch of the Red Cross, which has headquarters in St. Louis, was supplying food and clothing to 27,000 families in Southeast Missouri, Southern Illinois, Arkansas and Oklahoma. Relief measures were underway in 24 counties in Southeast Missouri, 15 counties in Southern Illinois, all of the 75 counties in Arkansas and 28 counties in Oklahoma. Since the first of the year, relief has been extended in 33 of 254 counties in Texas and in nine of the 56 counties of Montana. Other branches of the Red Cross are supplying relief in several states to the south and east of the territory covered by the Midwestern branch.

Situation Growing Worse.

In the Midwestern territory the Red Cross since last fall has spent $541,152 from its national fund and local chapters in Missouri, Illinois, Arkansas and Oklahoma, reported that on Dec. 31 they had spent $75,251 of their own funds and distributed donated supplies worth $39,761.

Evans said that figures even a week old are misleading because the situation is becoming progressively worse. "We don't begin to feel the need until local resources are exhausted," he said. "In some sections stores of food and reserves of money have enabled farmers to get by, but as more and more of them are exhausted day by day a tremendous increase in relief becomes necessary. At the close of the year we were helping 3,840 families in Southeast Missouri. Now the number is more than 9,000, and we expect that before the winter is over 10,000 will have needed our help."

Evans cited as indicative of the manner in which the need is developing a report from the head of the local Red Cross chapter at Marianna, Lee County, Ark. From Aug. 1 to Dec. 22, $649 had been spent from local funds for relief of 200 families. From Dec. 22 to Dec. 31, 822 families had received relief with the aid of an appropriation of $11,190 from funds of the national organization.

Few Applications Rejected.

"For the last four days," the report said, "applications have been coming in at the rate of 250 a day. Our investigators have reported people eating walnuts, and living on parched corn and turnip greens." The 822 families assisted by funds from the national organization were among 867 who applied for relief, only 35 applications being rejected after investigation.

The situation in Arkansas, Evans says, is more acute than that of other states, not only because its people are more improvident than others, but because the drought was more severe there and followed a number of set-backs.

"In 1927 Eastern Arkansas was inundated by the great flood," he said. "In 1928 a July flood wiped out 23,000,000 acres of cotton and corn. In 1929 there were tornadoes in 45 or 50 counties, and this year, because of the drought and lower prices their cash return on crops was only 30 per cent of normal."

Christians in Arkansas. In Arkansas 20,012 families were receiving aid from the Red Cross on Dec. 31, and Evans estimates the number has increased to at least 30,000 in the last week. In Illinois 1,600 families were receiving help, and it is estimated that 4,000 will need it before winter is over. In Oklahoma 2,774 families were being helped and provision is being made to care for 12,000.

To check up on reports received from local officers which indicated the need to greater than generally believed, a special division of the Red Cross went to St. Francis and Lee counties in Arkansas on Christmas day and investigated the condition of 27 families. He reasoned that if they ever had sufficient food they would have it on Christmas, and he selected the homes he visited at random, without consulting local relief officers.

"It is almost impossible to picture the conditions I found," he reported. "In the 27 homes I visited there was only one that had made any attempt at Christmas decoration, and that was most meager.

found six of the 27 had received Red Cross assistance. One of the six had shared his provisions with another family.

Sugar in Ode of 27 Homes.

There was no hysteria. The families were huddled around fires, for most part uncomplaining. In every instance I looked into the flour and meal barrels, into the cupboards, smokehouse and actually checked for food conditions.

"In none of the 27 homes did I find any evidence of coffee. Only once did I find sugar, and it was no butter. Twice I saw milk. In only one case did I find anything approaching a Christmas dinner, and in this instance the family had received about $4 of Red Cross supplies the day before, consisting of flour, meal, lard, molasses, beans, rice, and had killed one of their three chickens. The food they had cooked was a meager meal for the family of seven."

The report contained a description of the condition of about 20 of the 27 families.

Extracts from reports received from throughout the drought areas disclose widespread need. Typical reports follow:

Warren, Ark.—"All agree that human food and clothing is most pressing need, likewise feed for stock."

Charleston, Mo.—"There is less stock in the county than at any time since the immediate days following the Mississippi Valley flood, stock having been sold to reduce feed for stock to infinitesimal."

Crocker, Mo.—"Much stock has been sold by farmers unable to buy feed. The poultry supply is rapidly diminishing as it is being used for food."

Metropolis, Ill.—"The farmers have been hard hit, but being a thrifty lot, are by no means in a destitute condition. Their biggest problem will be obtaining feed for their dairy stock over the winter months. In many cases they are gradually selling their cows, hogs etc."

Waldron, Ark.—"Our farmers who are without feed must either sacrifice their cattle or allow them to starve."

Parkton, Ark.—"A great number of stock died of hunger and many people are suffering."

REPORTS OF ONE-MAN CARS ON THE CITY LIMITS LINE

President of Public Service Co.
Says Change Has Not Been Ordered

The appearance on the City Limits line of street cars which have been converted for one-man operation has given rise to reports that that line is to be changed over to one-man operation. Stanley Clarke, president of the Public Service Co., said today that all cars on that line were still being operated with two men. He added, however, that the company had cars equipped for one-man operation on several lines and that on some of these men are being trained as operators.

Clarke said the company had no announcement to make as to any proposed installations of one-man operation. The Union and Natural Bridge lines are others which it has been reported are to be changed over.

The only city lines now operating with one-man cars, Clarke said, are Southampton, Broadway and Thirty-ninth street. The Thirty-ninth street line is a short one on which cars have been operated by one man for several years. The Southampton and Broadway lines were changed over recently. In St. Louis County the Kirkwood-Ferguson and the Creve Coeur lines and some other short lines are served by one-man cars. The cars used have been rebuilt to provide the necessary safety devices.

PENDERGAST SAID TO BE KEEPING OUT OF SENATE FIGHT

Supporters of Wammack
for President Pro Tem Cheered by Report of Stand of Democratic Boss

THINK THAT HE IS AFTER BIGGER GAME
His Backing of Whitecotton for Post Might Jeopardize Chance to Dictate Governorship Nomination.

By CURTIS A. REED,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Jan. 6.—Information which reached Democratic Senators today from Kansas City that Tom Pendergast, Democratic boss of Jackson County and the most effective single influence in State Democratic politics, was keeping hands off the bitter contest which has developed over the selection by the Democratic caucus of a president pro tem for the Senate, has strengthened the forces supporting Senator Wammack of Bienville in the opinion that Wammack will be successful over Senator Whitecotton

In the period when it was generally believed that Pendergast, whose influence extends far beyond the borders of his county, was pulling the wires behind the scenes in the fight against Wammack, there was a feeling of uneasiness among the Bloomfield Senator's supporters. But, convinced that Senator Casey, who is the leader in the attempt to gather support for Whitecotton, is proceeding only because of personal feeling, they expressed confidence that Wammack would have the requisite 10 votes needed to win.

Pendergast's Possible Reason.

Pendergast is a shrewd and successful political boss, who rose to a commanding position in Democratic organization councils when Jackson County gave the Democratic side 40,000 majority in the last election. There was gossip that this success would put Pendergast virtually in the position of party dictator in the next campaign, and that he could name the next nominee for Governor. It has been pointed out that if Pendergast intervened in the Senate organization squabble, he would antagonize rural Democrats in many parts of the State, and that it might prove very costly to him in the future. The office of president pro tem means little if anything to Pendergast. The office of Governor, with power to appoint police commissioners in Kansas City, means a good deal.

If nothing occurs to disabuse the minds of the Wammack supporters of the belief now held that Pendergast has not taken a hand against Wammack, the boss will not suffer, no matter how the contest turns out.

The earlier opinion that Pendergast would use his influence in attempting to control the votes of several Western Missouri Senators against Wammack probably grew out of Casey's activity. If it had not been for Casey, who is high in the Pendergast councils, the opposition to Wammack would have made little progress. Casey, joining with Senator Buford of Ellington, has waged a relentless campaign against the Bloomfield Senator, and has the support of Senators Brogan and Kinney of St. Louis. They first settled on Senator Donnelly of Lebanon as their candidate, but Donnelly is recovering from a serious illness and will not be able to attend any legislative session for several weeks. Eventually failing them, the Casey-Buford forces drifted to the support of Senator Whitecotton of Paris, who had avoided a close alignment with either faction, and who offered the only possible hope for success to the anti-Wammack movement.

Wammack & Whitecotton 7.

On the surface there has been no change in the situation since yesterday. Wammack still has eight votes and Whitecotton seemingly is certain of seven. The winner must have 10, and must get the extra votes needed from a group of three western Senators: Crouse of St. Joseph, Clark of Richmond and Gordon of Liberty. The Casey camp has attempted to attract strength by the argument that support of Whitecotton would be a move for harmony, while the principal argument advanced by Senator Crouse is that "a Senator may change his mind." That Senator may change his mind, between aligning himself with Senator Buford in the control of the Senate and in aligning himself with the Wammack-Deardorff group.

It appeared today that R. E. Marrs of Carthage would be re-elected secretary of the Senate over former Senator Robert Mitchell of Lawrence County.

In the House of Representatives indications point to the election of Eugene Noland of Hannibal as speaker and Joseph Kennedy of Marshall as chief clerk.

FRESH ATTEMPTS TO GET MARINES OUT OF NICARAGUA

Senator Johnson's Resolution for All Documents Relating to Occupation Adopted Without Debate

KING CALLS FOR IMMEDIATE ACTION

State Department to Submit to Senate All Papers Not Incompatible With Public Interest.

By the Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, Jan. 6.—New attempts to force the withdrawal of Marines from Nicaragua, where eight were killed last week, have been begun in the Senate.

A resolution by Senator Johnson of California, the ranking Republican on the Foreign Relations Committee, requesting the Secretary of State to transmit to the Senate copies of all communications and documents relating to the landing and maintenance of the Marines in Nicaragua since 1924, was adopted without debate.

Senator King (Dem.), Utah, at the same time offered a resolution requesting the immediate withdrawal of all Marines from Nicaragua. His motion was left upon the table subject to call at any time.

Wants Facts, Johnson Says.
"I just want to ascertain the facts, first," said Senator Johnson later in explanation of his resolution. "I think it well that we give a little concern to our own continent and our own boys at this time when some are so concerned about the troubles of Europe."

State Department officials indicated that all the papers would be sent to the Senate which are not incompatible with public interest if they were published. This is the same position taken by President Hoover and Secretary Stimson last year when the Senate asked for the papers relating to the London naval treaty negotiations.

Nicaragua Guard Fights Several Battles With Insurgents.

MANAGUA, Jan. 6.—Patrols of the Nicaraguan National Guard, from the United States Marines, have fought several engagements with insurgent forces in the densely wooded country between Toto-galpa and Ocotal within the last few days, it was reported today.

The engagements were in the same district where eight American Marines were killed and four wounded in two fights last week. The insurgents were all declared to be followers of Augustino Sandino.

One of the patrols under Lieut. J. MacDonald, fought a group of 100 insurgents near Llorey, killing three. One member of the patrol was slightly wounded.

Yesterday evening another patrol had a running engagement with an insurgent group near Chipote. One of the insurgents was killed but there were no casualties among the guards.

Capt. R. E. Forsyth, commanding a patrol from Ocotal, reported the destruction of two insurgent camps. Thirty-six cadets of the National Military Academy left here yesterday by airplane under the command of Capt. Edward Trumbull for service in the northern area.

James Robert Earnhardt of Concord, N. C., who was wounded in the fight Jan. 3, is still in a serious condition and physicians doubt if he will recover. Mack Hutcherson of Shreveport, La.; Frank Austin Jackson, Lawrenceville, Ga., and David M. Kirkendall, Chicago, who also were wounded, are expected to recover.

Postponed Message from Sandino Tells of Order to Burn Cities.

By the Associated Press.
MEXICO CITY, Jan. 6.—Representatives of Augustino Sandino, Nicaraguan insurgent chief, today made public a letter from Sandino, said to have been written at his headquarters, El Chipoton, and announced into Mexico by way of San Salvador, in which he says:

"In order to save Nicaragua it is necessary to destroy it."

"We have sent final orders to burn the cities of our republic, because if the invading assassin, destroying our national autonomy, is going to rob us of our homeland, at least we will have rebuild it over the ashes of our bodies."

"Good wishes to the people that regard without fear our destruction. Fatherland and liberty. (Signed) A. C. Sandino."

Jose Constantino Gonzales, who calls himself secretary in Mexico to Sandino, also made public a telegram which he said had been sent to Senators King and Borah in Washington. The telegram said:

"Withdrawal of Marines should be last act of the 20 years' long drama of intervention of Nicaragua. Latin-American repudiates American military intervention. I assure you that Sandino would lay down arms and our country would be completely free and automatically pacified if the Marine are withdrawn. Sandino and his followers are only defending Nicaragua's autonomy. We do not demand the withdrawal of the Marines as a favor but as an act of undeniable and impending justice."

PURCHASE OF PATHÉ
BY R-K-O APPROVED

$4,630,000 to Be Paid for Motion Picture Concern, Part in 6 Pct. Notes.

Henry H. Spitz, Deputy Attorney General, charged stock in the company had been sold to foreign-born stage managers who had lost their investments. He said that 200,000 shares of stock had been issued to the singer for formulas for beauty preparations and for the use of her name. The assets of the corporation were sold recently by Joseph P. Kennedy, chairman, of the board of Pathé Exchange. Radio-Keith-Orpheum is to take possession within 20 days.

The Pathé Exchange has more than 1500 employees. The merger, Kennedy said, has been advised, will insure continuity of employment for all these in so far as plans of operation will permit.

The agreement, Kennedy's letter to the stockholders explained, involves the payment of $4,630,759 ($500,000 in cash and the remainder in 6 per cent notes, maturing in five equal annual installments, beginning Jan. 1, 1932) for the Culver City studio, Jersey City laboratory, Pathé News, Audio Review, stars' and directors' contracts, certain scenarios, furniture and three feature pictures now being released.

Pathé will retain 49 per cent (4,300 shares) of the stock of the DuPont-Pathé Film Manufacturing Co., manufacturers of negative and positive motion picture film. The remaining 51 per cent is owned by E. I. du Pont Nemours & Co.

Negotiations between Pathé and Radio-Keith-Orpheum have been under way for several months. Three stockholders of the Pathé Exchange filed suit in Supreme Court Dec. 29 to restrain the sale of its assets on the ground that the contract between the two corporations was unfair to Pathé stockholders.

missal of the charges the Mayor had announced that Pritchard would be reappointed.

Pritchard, George B. Heath, who was superintendent of electrical construction and maintenance in the Department of Public Utilities, and the contractor, A. M. Rykoff of Chicago, were indicted on April 26, 1929, on charges of obtaining money under false pretenses through overpayments of $157,864 to Rykoff. After Rykoff's death last week, on the eve of his trial, the Circuit Attorney dismissed the charges against Pritchard and Heath.

The Mayor announced immediately that Pritchard and Heath could have their old jobs back. Heath accepted at once but is taking a few days before returning to work. Pritchard asked for time to consider. At 4 p.m. yesterday, Pritchard, accompanied by his wife, called on Mayor Miller at city hall. Jean L. Rilliet Jr., who has been Director of Public Utilities since Pritchard's resignation, was called into the conference. At 4:40 p.m. Pritchard and Miller came into an outer office and the Mayor said to reporters, "Meet the new Director of Public Utilities."

Pritchard had in his hand his commission, dated yesterday, and he filed it with the City Register forthwith and took the oath of office. He sat with the Board of Public Service this morning as his first official duty.

The position pays $8900 a year. Rilliet resigned it on request and accepted his old job of division engineer in light, heat and power, at $5000 a year. There is no possibility that Pritchard and Heath will make the kind of Alderman to pass relief bills to pay their salaries for the period of their absence from City Hall. The Mayor said this was a matter for them to decide, with the City Counselor, Board of Estimate and Apportionment and Board of Aldermen. Pritchard said as to this, "It's not for me to say."

Neither the Mayor, Pritchard nor Rilliet had any comment on the turn of events. Pritchard obviously was pleased to be back on his old job.

City officials have not reached a decision as to whether to sue the Rykoff estate to recover $157,864.

POLISH RESIDENTS DENOUNCE STATEMENTS OF WILHELM MARX

Resolution Adopted in St. Louis Denies III-Treatment of German Minorities in Poland.

A mass meeting of Polish residents of St. Louis, East St. Louis, Granite City and Madison, held Sunday at the People's Hall in St. Louis, adopted a resolution protesting against certain statements made by Dr. Wilhelm Marx, former Chancellor of Germany, in an article which was published in the Post-Dispatch, Sunday, Dec. 25.

The resolution says Marx implied that German minorities in Poland were being brutally ill-treated by the Poles and denied any such condition exists. It decided that the statement of Dr. Marx is part of a "world-wide plan of propaganda to prejudices America and other countries against Poland on the issue and the so-called corridor question" in favor of revision of the Versailles treaty.

The resolution further says "that since the Versailles treaty only partially righted the wrongs from which Poland had suffered so much at Germany's hands for a century and a half, such revision, should one occur in the future, would be just and internationally proper and equitable if it will among other accomplishments effect a return to Poland of the things that are Poland's and were hers throughout the centuries, even when stolen from her under the guise of dismemberment. Dr. Marx and other German propagandists' protestations to the contrary notwithstanding."

Stanley J. Witkowski signed the resolution as chairman of the meeting and others who signed it as members of the committee which drafted it were John J. Gorski, Victor Tryniski, Bernard Zielinski, Teofil Prastek, Jan Mencynski, and Walter Jagielski, chairman of the Polish National Catholic Church.

ON NARCOTICS CHARGE

Former Movie Star Had Been Released From Asylum as Cured of Habit.

By the Associated Press.
SAN DIEGO, Cal., Jan. 6.—Alma Rubens, former movie star, who was released from a State asylum a year ago as cured of drug addiction, was in jail today awaiting a hearing on a federal charge of possessing narcotics.

Miss Rubens was arrested at a hotel here yesterday after her companion on a trip to Agua Caliente, Ruth Palmer, complained to police the actress had beaten her. Police said they found 40 cubes of a narcotic sewn into one of Miss Rubens' gowns when they searched her room.

"It's a frameup," the actress cried on reaching the jail. "I have been robbed of $3000 worth of jewelry. I have made a comeback after my terrible experience and now this happens. It just can't be true."

DANDRUFF

A Sure Way to Remove It

There is one sure way that never fails to remove dandruff completely, and that is to dissolve it. This removes it entirely. To do this, mix two parts fine plain ordinary liquid soaps; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your symptoms of dandruff will be gone, and two or three more applications will completely dissolve and remove every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will be flat instantly, and your hair will be flat, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid soap at any drug store and four ounces is all you will need. This simple remedy entirely satisfies.

TWO PLANS OFFERED TO START AUDITORIUM

Kinsey's Proposals for Partial Construction at Large Savings Reported to Mayor.

Alternative plans for partial construction of the proposed Municipal Auditorium were reported to Mayor Miller yesterday by President Kinsey of the Board of Public Service. The Mayor is considering adoption of one of the two schemes and thinks it likely one may be carried out as soon as possible.

The entire building, as planned by the Memorial Plaza Commission, could be built at present price levels for $6,500,000. Kinsey said. Heretofore it has been estimated that cost would be $7,000,000 or more, but Kinsey pointed out that construction costs are about 15 per cent lower now than a year ago.

The 1922 bond issue provided $5,000,000 for the auditorium, and $1,000,000 for the addition to Market street, between Fourteenth and Fifteenth streets, is being acquired as part of Memorial Plaza, with plain bond funds.

Salomon's plans are indefinite, he said, but he will not remain with the National Department Stores Co. of New York, the parent organization of Nugent's. He declined to discuss the reason for the resignation, saying: "There isn't much I could say now. I'll be back in St. Louis in a few days and when I get back, I'll discuss the matter further."

Salomon has been president and general manager of Nugent's since August, 1927. Cramer will bring his son, Franz A. Cramer Jr., with him from Denver.

One Touch of this Double Action
Discovery and You Remove Corn

Now a truly startling discovery has been made by a St. Louis chiropractor that not only quickly relieves corn and bunions pain, but is designed to prevent regrowth of corn. That's why it is called Double Action. For it is based on an entirely distinct principle. There are two remedies—No. 1 and No. 2.

1. You simply touch the corn or bunion with No. 1 and the pain ends. Then the corn can be removed in a few minutes. Next apply No. 2 to keep the corn bed soft, so the corn won't grow back. Ordinary methods merely reduce pain for a few hours. Dr. Wootier's new scientific way—is Double Action. Sold by all druggists on guarantee of satisfaction or money back.

Watch Your Throat!

Don't Let It Get Sore or "Tight"

A sore throat may be the start of something serious. Treated promptly and decisively a "sore" throat need not get really sore or develop dangerously. Get McKesson Extol on the job as soon as you can. That's positively the best thing you can do. Extol will stop an ongoing sore throat in three garglings of one minute each. It's so highly germicidal and fast that it's the "10-second antiseptic." Also, it's extremely penetrating, which is equally important. It penetrates the folds and crevices in the mouth and throat; also the mucous membrane, and reaches the germs that lie hidden underneath the outer layer of mucus. Extol clears up a sore throat, cold in nose or head in a matter of minutes. If used daily as a preventive measure it will guard you through winter from infections. For all germicidal strength, Extol is safe, harmless—and a most delightful refreshing mouth wash. McKesson preparations seem insipid by comparison. More economical, too, may be used in greater dilution. All McKesson Service Druggists all over the country sell Extol. Get a bottle today for health insurance for the family. Note the name, EXTOL—a McKesson & Robbins product.

THE Chinese—shrewdest philosophers in all the world—have this ancient saying:—"Even a small pebble, cast in a still pool, creates many widening ripples."

Today this commonplace reflection applies well to American business. For when inventories are low and production is at a minimum, business all along the line is super-sensitive to new orders. When industry is at dead-center, even the slightest push can start wheels turning.

The publication "IRON AGE" recently illustrated the far-reaching effect which buying can have on employment by citing this actual incident:

A certain manufacturer placed an order for a special kind of steel. His jobber was out of stock. The steelmaker too, was out of stock. It even became necessary to blow in a special blast furnace to provide iron from which to make the steel. —And this was done.

Coke was required for the steel-making process. Little was on hand, or immediately available. A coal mine, shut down for months, reopened to obtain the coal from which to make the coke. Practically every operation went back to raw material sources. Altogether, 525 men were put to work at tasks only remotely connected with the original order which started the whole train of business gears.

As business men of St. Louis, our immediate concern today is with business prosperity right here in St. Louis,—with better employment conditions in and around St. Louis. Efforts toward the betterment of conditions distinctly begin at home. St. Louis must first care for its own!

Sir Samuel Hoare Tells London Parley Attitude Is Noncommittal Until Scheme Is Completed.

MUST DEMONSTRATE PLAN IS WORKABLE

Complete Good Will Essential to Responsible Self-Government Does Not Exist Now.

Yesterdays Lord Reading, speaking through Sir Samuel Hoare, today voiced his voice in protest against giving India responsible self-government.

Sir Samuel said the Conservative attitude was noncommittal toward the whole scheme of a future Indian Government now being worked out at the round-table conference until the complete plan of the proposed government is presented.

Yesterday Lord Reading, speaking for the Liberal party, outlined a responsible Cabinet which would be the keystone of the Indian government and it was observed that recommendations necessary to the existence of responsible self-government are to be found in India now, he said.

Cannot Shrink From Facts.

He spoke, he explained, without any desire to be obstructive, but the proponents of the proposed Indian Constitution would have to show him that their scheme was workable before he could support it. He said he wanted to see a Federal Government installed in India but that he could not shrink from the hard facts.

Only with the most complete good will in India could the complex constitutional scheme be possible, he declared, adding that, in his opinion, the present situation in India does not indicate such good will exists. The present attempt, he warned, might possibly end in setting up an unstable government in a country where there is already much inflammable material. The whole scheme fraught with so many practical difficulties, he said, that for the present, at least, he would be forced to withdraw his approval.

Indian Delegates Hopeful.

The speech disappointed the Indians, but they were relieved that Sir Samuel had merely withheld his support until he was convinced of the merits of the proposed system. He did not indicate that the Conservatives would oppose the completed work of the conference.

The Indians quickly returned to the attack and the next speaker began his talk with the assertion that continuation of the present government in India was impossible, for the Government and the people have lost confidence in one another.

SUPREME COURT TO HEAR DRY LAW RULING APPEAL JAN. 21

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 6.—The appeal of the Government to test the recent decision of Judge Clark holding the eighteenth amendment invalid today was advanced by the Supreme Court for hearing Wednesday, Jan. 21.

Chief Justice Hughes made this announcement today, and said the case would be heard ahead of all cases awaiting hearing on that date.

Counsel upholding the Clark decision yesterday requested the hearing be deferred until the middle of April on the plea that previous engagements would prevent their being ready at an earlier date.

FALL APPEAL HEARING DELAYED

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 6.—Hearings of appeals of Albert B. Fall, former Secretary of the Interior, and Harry M. Blackmer, convicted in connection with the Teapot Dome oil lease scandals, today were postponed by the District of Columbia Court of Appeals until Feb. 1.

The postponement was ordered to permit Judge D. Lawrence Green, recently appointed to the court by President Hoover, to take his seat. Fall was sentenced to a year in prison and to pay a $10,000 fine. Blackmer, former chairman of the Mid-West Oil Co., was fined $10,000 for contempt of court. He has remained abroad and refused to answer a court summons to testify.

Yesterday Lord Reading, speaking for the Liberal party, outlined a responsible Cabinet which would be the keystone of the Indian government and it was observed that his recommendations were similar to those which have been generally expected to come from Ramsay MacDonald himself.

From the very start, Sir Samuel told the conference, he has been doubtful of the wisdom of trying to apply the British House of Commons system to an All-India Federation. None of the conditions necessary to the existence of responsible self-government are to be found in India now, he said.

Former Aid Says Joffre Prepared Plan for Gen. Pershing's Army

Tells of Meeting of Marshal and President Wilson, Conference With Baker, and Introduction to American Commander.

By Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

Copyright, 1931, by the Press and Publishing Company, New York and Post-Dispatch.

PARIS, Jan. 6.—Col. Jean Fabry, Marshal Joffre's former aid, recounts in Le'Intransigeant "How Joffre created Pershing's army."

Fabry declares Joffre from the start of the United States' entry into the World War favored an American army organized independently and prepared a plan for it on the cruiser on which he left France for Washington April 15, 1917.

"America," Fabry writes, "was burning with a desire to employ a force which it knew to be formidable, but did not know on which end of the problem to begin."

"Would it send an expeditionary force or ceding to Balfour's mission, which arrived first, would it form only small units, companies or battalions to be incorporated in the British army? Would it vote conscription and have a national army or would it renounce both?"

"America hesitated because she lacked tradition on the point. Joffre arrived and from the beginning it was evident that the decision depended upon his attitude."

Joffre sees Wilson.

Fabry then recounts Joffre's plan for an independent American army and the excitement over the conscription vote which would make it possible. On May 2, Joffre saw President Wilson, Fabry giving details of the conversation in which Wilson asked Joffre if Secretary of War Baker understood his ideas, to which Joffre replied that he had explained in detail how an independent American army ought to be created, and Baker had agreed.

NEW HEARING IN YOUNGSTOWN
STEEL MERGER RULING DENIED

No Decision as Yet on Whether an Appeal of Error Will Be Taken.

YOUNGSTOWN, O. Jan. 6.—John David Jenkins in Common Pleas Court today denied an application for a new hearing in the injunction suit to prevent the merger of Bethlehem Steel Corporation and Youngstown Sheet and Tube Co. No hearing was sought on the application which was filed after Judge Jenkins granted the injunction Dec. 29, and the denial today merely took the term of a docket entry.

The application and its denial clear the legal path for an appeal on error, if the defending companies decide to follow that course. Officers of both companies have said that no decision as to their future course has been reached as yet. Bethlehem and Sheet and Tube officers held one conference in New York soon after the decision. It was thought today they may be holding a second meeting, as James A. Campbell, Sheet and Tube chairman, Frank Purcell, president, and Eugene Bennett, counsel, all were out of town. Their offices gave out no information as to their whereabouts.

NEW CHINESE LAW PLACES WOMEN ON EQUALITY WITH MEN

By the Associated Press.

NANKING, Jan. 6.—Equality of men and women in this country is provided by a law which has passed the Legislative Council. The law, incorporated in the civil code, is primarily intended to elevate the women of this country to the same position as that enjoyed by the women of the western world. It is known as the law of family relations.

The chief danger of the present right to share in her master's estate and divorce laws are changed. Under the old laws it was much easier for a husband than for a wife to obtain a divorce. Under the new law the grounds are the same in both cases.

While under the old laws a woman was forbidden to dispose of her property without the consent of her husband, the new law gives her full power over it. Unmarried daughters have the same rights as the men in both cases.

Marriage of cripples, persons suffering from incurable diseases or the extremely young is forbidden by the statute.

G. O. P. National Committee Reports Expenditure of $745,912.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 6.—The Republican National Committee spent $745,912 in 1930. At the same time, reports to the clerk of the House showed yesterday, the Democratic senatorial campaign committee expended $46,572.

Receipts of the Republican committee were given as $700,591, while the Democratic organization took in $48,666. The Democratic National Committee already has filed its report. At the year-end the Republicans had $136,563 and the Democrats $2092. Bernard M. Baruch, New York financier, contributed $34,000 to the Democrats since the last report was filed on Oct. 30. MARSHAL JOFFRE

Thousands More Wait in Line for Final Look at the Hero of the Marne Today.

NATIONAL FUNERAL SERVICE TOMORROW

Cortege Will Move Through Arc de Triomphe and Then to Invalides for Temporary Burial.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Jan. 6.—Frenchmen today viewed for the last time the body, features of Marshal Joffre, hero of the Marne, and commander of the French armies in the first two years of the World War.

Soon saw a sudden increase in the long, wide line of Parisians awaiting their turn to pass into the chapel. As the shops and offices closed for the mid-day meal many men and women abandoned the prospect of food and ran to secure advanced places in the line.

Throughout the day, thousands passed the bier. Among them were many who journeyed from the far provinces. They waited, silently, until they were permitted to pass, two by two, into the chapel.

Once during the afternoon the endless procession was halted while delegations from the American embassy entered by a private door and presented two great wreaths. One, entirely of red and pink roses, was inscribed "American Army." The other, from Ambassador Walter E. Edge, was of carnations, orchids and red roses and tied with a wide tri-colored ribbon. For a few moments the American delegation, clad in full dress uniforms and regalia, stood with bared heads, then slowly withdrew.

Later Crown Prince Leopold of Belgium was received by Gen. Lasson, representing President Doumergue, and Gen. Gouraud, the military Governor of Paris, on behalf of the French.

At 4 p.m. Marshal Joffre arrived quietly at the chapel of the Military School from her home, where she had gone shortly before, and attended a mass celebrated at the altar behind the body of the Marshal.

Sixty-five thousand persons were estimated to have filed into the catafalque in the chapel of the Ecole Militaire from 9 a. m. to 1 p. m. yesterday, and it was thought that many more would view the body today. Thousands were outside awaiting the opening of the doors.

A suggestion is to pay this money to industry instead of to the idle. He explained that he did not think of it as a subsidy, but as a means of enabling industry to put work by putting it into the payrolls of industry instead of into the pockets of idle workers.

Douglas' suggestion is to pay this money to industry instead of to the idle. He explained that he did not think of it as a subsidy, but as a means of enabling industry to put work by putting it into the payrolls of industry instead of into the pockets of idle workers.

"It is necessary that the gas within the oil pools be saved. Without it, much oil will escape back into the sands and cannot be recovered. With wise use of the gas supply below ground, practically all of the oil can be drawn out. This is the core of the unit plan of operation."

At 9 o'clock tonight the body will be removed to the Cathedral of Notre Dame for the last requiem of the church. Tomorrow at dawn it will be taken from the Cathedral and in an impressive cortège, will be carried to the Arc de Triomphe, and to the Invalides for burial not far from the tomb of Napoleon.

There will be only a five-minute wait at the Arc de Triomphe, one of the Marshall's last requests, that if he died in winter the people of Paris and the troops he had trained to absorb them.

There may be a drawback to this plan, Dietrich admitted, but "when 4,000,000 citizens are in danger of being driven to despair, quia and scruples are nothing and positive measures are everything."

The chief danger of the present situation, he said, is the crushing of independent business enterprise, on the inventiveness and daring of which the entire capitalistic system depends.

"Economic systems of earlier times have gone under because they were not equal to the problems to which they were applied," he declared, reminding his audience that, although reparations payments are widely blamed for all of Germany's fiscal ills, that does not stop us from taking positive action."

"Reparations, he said, not only drain the economic blood of the nation, but also are a contributory cause of unemployment." They also upset the economic balance of the whole world, he declared, and hitting the creditor nations as well as Germany.

"When, if ever, Germany will bring up the reparations problems for consideration," he said, "has not been decided. But in any case we are not considering violation of any treaties."

Note on Our Economic Flight.
To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

Y OUR editorial page continues to be the only daily page comparable to the so-called journals of opinion, such as the Nation, the New Republic and their kind. An example, of many, is your recent editorial, "Our 'Dollarocracy,'" Dec. 26.

This editorial gives the significant information that in 1921 there were 21 persons in America with an annual income of over $1,000,000, and in 1928 there were 511.

May we not find here the cause of "overproduction" and the consequent depression?

It seems that the increased mechanical and managerial efficiency has benefited chiefly the superwealthy; that this class has accumulated most of the purchasing power of the country; and hence that the greater consuming classes, the middle and lower, have not sufficient means for consumption.

This state of affairs has been further aggravated by the contraction of that currency which moves most goods; that is, effective credit.

If this diagnosis is correct, the remedy is next to seek. Barring major operations, two old-fashioned, orthodox remedies suggest themselves: (1) An inflation of the legal currency by means of the Federal Reserve System; and (2) an increase in the tax on the largest incomes by the Federal and state taxing powers. The money so collected might be used in many ways, especially in the speedy payment of Government bonds. This would tend to break the monetary ice jam which now clogs the flow of money and the moving of commodities.

Prof. Parrington has described American political history as a struggle "between the spirit of the Declaration of Independence and the spirit of the Constitution, the one primarily concerned with the rights of man, the other more practically concerned with the rights of property." The wise Tory of today will become a humanitarian of the Jefferson-Lincoln school for the time being if only to serve the Hamilton-Webster-Hamilton school of property. J. L. E.

How Rudy Does It.
To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

S TOP almost any place on the dial at 7 p.m. Thursday, and the old radio sounds like Calculating Cal syphoning his frumenty. But wait for the announcements and you will be informed that it is the "Vagabond Lover" crooning to his dear little yeast cake! No doubt radio fans, who have been in tune with Rudy's exultant exhaust, will be titillated pink to know just what it is that he sings on while he broadcasts. A report from New York says it is a very expensive brand of throat lozenges; that without them he would be unable to sing (or curse) a note. JAMES MCINTOSH,

When Government Is Particular Criminals.
To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

A NEWS item tells of a Chicago racketeer being fined $17,500 and sentenced to confinement in Leavenworth prison for five years for failure to render proper income tax, said income deriving from illicit liquor business and gambling resorts. Such court procedure makes the Government participants.

Furthermore, when a tough nut beats up a tenderfoot, "the law" fines nut, pockets the fine, while tenderfoot foots his own doctor bill, loss of time and gore. When an absconder absconds with a wad of dough entrusted to his loving care by variegated boobs, "the law" apprehends and sentences him to a year and a day, and, as a lagomorph, fines him several thousand dollars—more or less; and if the fine is paid, the money goes into the capacious maw of "the law," while the ravaged victim canch himself that the gentleman who swiped his hard-earned savings will languish in prison only long enough to be pardoned and then live happily ever after.

Verily, in the language of the dead: "Quo vadis?"

For Shorter Labor Day and Week.
To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

IN facing the unemployment situation it appears that the only logical, practical and permanent solution is a drastic and substantial reduction in the average hours of labor per man per week. Think what it would mean if the railroads, mills and factories, mines, shops, stores and offices, together with our Federal, state and municipal governments, would establish even a six-hour-five-day week, or a maximum of 36 hours per week, performed in three or four days.

While some industries have adopted this plan in certain localities, the great majority still adhere to the average hours in excess of 10 to 32 hours per week, despite the logic that the installation of labor-saving machinery demands a reduction in the amount of labor time. The laborer's working time should be correspondingly reduced instead of dispensing entirely with the laborer's services.

BURKE LEMLY.

PROTECT THE HIGHWAYS.

The highways around St. Louis have become so infested by highwaymen that extraordinary means must be adopted to protect them. Down on the LeMay Ferry road in Jefferson County such a state of terrorization exists that filling stations close at twilight and travelers are warned against traversing the highway at night. The highways in St. Louis County are little better off. The way things are going, it cannot be long until a similar state of terrorism obtains out there.

The duty of the State and county governments is to protect the highways. Unfortunately, we might have in Missouri a State highway patrol, except for the failure of the last Legislature to create one. The absence of such protection at a time when highwaymen are unusually active ought to render the next Legislature more receptive to a suggestion that we have a highway patrol. The highways offer as good an opportunity for patrolo men to enforce the laws against highway robbery as they do to highwaymen to defraud them. The county courts in the counties bordering upon St. Louis have abundant legal authority to protect the highways. They can authorize Sheriffs to impress special officers into service for the protection of life and property in emergency.

The last census showed the population of St. Louis County to be approximately a quarter of a million. That is, a considerable part of the people of St. Louis have their homes out there. They are continually going to and fro, as they are constantly going to and from their clubs and the homes of their friends. Thus what is a suburban region and enjoys no more protection than is enjoyed by all such communities outside the province of a metropolitan police force becomes a tempting prize for road agents. Both the county and the State are obligated to give such a community protection commensurate with its peril.

At present it is possible to hold up an automobile or one of the county roads, to rob the occupants even of their clothes, and to hold the place for a considerable interval without any chance that an officer of the law will come along. Some of the county roads are as far removed from protection to travelers as highways out in the interior of the State, notwithstanding the homes of city people are all about.

To leave the highways unprotected amounts to an invitation to holdup men. A prompt and stern protection will drive all such gentry off the highways.

INCREASING VIGILANCE IN THE WATCH TOWERS.

In its review of the year's politics, the League for Independent Political Action, of which Dr. John Dewey is the head, found gratification in the awakening of the nation's newspapers to the real state of affairs. Said the statement: "The political service of the press in 1930 has been unusual. Not since the war have newspapers served the people so well. A growing tendency to give both sides of the picture has been evident."

While the compliment would have been greater had it referred to a period of prosperity instead of a year of depression, when editors could not help being sharply critical of the management of public matters, it nevertheless does mean that the press generally is taking more seriously its responsibility to the people. There is no better news than this increase in vigilance in the watch towers.

STREET PROGRESS AND PLANS.

The report on what has been and will be done with the 1928 bond issue items of $5,800,000 for paving major streets, made by W. W. Horner, chief paving engineer for the city, is particularly timely, in view of the current unrest and suspicion among taxpayers in the matter of street improvements. Property owners, pinched by the depression, have begun to complain about special taxes, frequently thinking there is inequity in the assessments and no virtue in the plans.

Horner, reporting to President Kinsey of the Board of Public Service, showed that the use of bond funds to bear the city's share of the cost of paving important traffic arteries had followed a logical and consistent policy. The money has not been used for projects of mere neighborhood importance, but for thoroughfares of value to the whole city, and it has been applied in a proportion calculated to keep the share assessed against abutting property down to a reasonable level. It would be obviously unjust to ask the owners of land on a main street to pay the entire cost of paving, when traffic from all sections used the street. On the other hand, property owners must expect to pay their part, because the improvements bring an increased value and usefulness to their real estate.

Seven years have elapsed under a 10-year program of paving broad, major streets all over the city. In every district the benefits already are visible, and some of the most interesting and valuable jobs are yet to be done, after condemnation proceedings are completed. This decade is seeing a maze of streets designed for the horse and buggy age transformed into a handy network of arteries for the swift travel of the gasoline day. As a result of the improvements, hundreds of blocks of new territory have been made available for development, and the consequent building of homes, stores and factories has increased property values, raised the city's assessed valuation, improved the appearance of St. Louis and contributed to the community's prosperity. The relief to traffic already has been great.

Horner makes a modest proposal for another 15,000-$600 bond issue to extend the work for another 10-year period, 1934-43, and $3,000,000 for separation of grades at principal street intersections. The latter idea may seem novel, but it will be a commonplace in the not far distant future. The streets made with the 1928 bond money are leading the way to the attractive viaducts of the next decade.

ANOTHER CARBON MONOXIDE DEVICE.

A challenging problem of the machine age is carbon monoxide, the deadly motor gas, odorous and invisible, which each year takes its toll of lives among persons exposed to exhaust fumes in close quarters. Caused as it is by incomplete combustion of motor fuel, the problem has been attacked with the dual motive of saving lives and of adding to automotive efficiency. With many experts at work on the subject, announcements come from time to time that a device has been perfected, but thus far none has appeared on the market. The last report of that sort came last January from Johns Hopkins University, with the news that only reduction of a cumbersome machine to marketable simplicity remained before the menace was ended. To date, however, nothing more has been heard of this discovery.

Dr. Miller Reese Hutchins of New York, who has a reputation as an inventor in the automotive field, now gives new hope of a solution. His device is simple, of few parts, weighs only 24 ounces and has been in successful use for six months, he says. It not only eliminates carbon monoxide, the inventor asserts, but adds one-third to fuel efficiency. Its principle is based on a catalyst, which adds one part of oxygen to the deadly carbon monoxide, converting it into harmless carbon dioxide.

ST. LOUIS POST-DISPATCH, TUESDAY, JANUARY 6, 1931.

RETRIEVING A BLUNDER.

In an attempt to retrieve a blunder the Federal Power Commission has invited all employees of the old commission, including former Solicitor Charles A. Russell and Accountant William V. King, to file applications for reappointment. Dismissal of Russell and King, along with former Executive Secretary Bonner, was the first act of the new commission. In fact, the commission had not yet been formally organized. Commissioners Smith, Garand and Draper gave the order of dismissal without waiting for the two other members to be sworn in.

Russell and King have engaged in a feud with Bonner ever since the latter took office in 1929, on the alleged ground that Bonner was biased toward private power interests. The dismissal had no effect upon Bonner, who had already resigned, and was peculiarly unjust to Russell and King, who have distinguished themselves by their faithfulness to a high ideal of public service. With Bonner gone, it was difficult to understand why the commission deemed it necessary for harmony's sake to fire Russell and King.

Senators Walsh and Wheeler and others immediately rushed to the defense of the two men. Wheeler charged that the three members of the commission acted on orders from the White House and said that "Russell and King are paying the price that is required by faithful public service under this administration." Walsh, in a letter to Chairman Smith, wrote: "It is a matter of profound regret to me that the confidence I hoped the country would have in the new commission *** should be so early and so rudely disturbed."

The incident gave rise to discussion of a possible reconsideration by the Senate of the Power Commission's confirmation. Although there was some doubt as to the Senate's ability to do so without the consent of the President, a troublesome situation loomed for the commission. It seized upon the invitation to Russell and King to file for reinstatement in an effort to avoid it.

Despite the commission's action, Senator Walsh moved yesterday to oust the three members who fired Russell and King.

MIRRORS FOR ENDURANCE FLYERS.

Now it is endurance flying that feels the refining touch of woman's gentle hand. Gone are the crude days when a pair of pilots who delighted in calling themselves "tough hombres" could descend with a new record and bristling beards, to be hailed as the nation's heroes. Later residents in ambulating aerial apartments kept up with their shaving and had fresh laundry delivered every few days, but it was not until woman entered the lists that a high esthetic plane was introduced to endurance aviation. When the Misses Bobbie Trout and Edna May Cooper, now circling and swooping above Los Angeles, sent an emergency call for a mirror, to repair shiny noses, a cave man epoch ended, and aviation entered the boudoir age. Having forgotten their compacts on going aloft, the feminine flyers asked for a mirror, breakfast and fuel, in that order. It was "spruce up" ahead of "stay up."

MR. ARBO'S DEPARTURE.

St. Louis audiences which have heard the concerts directed by Enrique Fernandez Arbos, guest conductor of the Symphony Orchestra, must view with great regret the approaching termination of his engagement here. Mr. Arbos has demonstrated the enviable faculty of playing music in such a way as to make it both interesting and important. Genuine lovers of music are always heartened by such unswerving interpretative honesty as Mr. Arbos consistently exhibits, especially in a day when such a high premium is placed upon mere virtuous slickness.

In Mr. Arbos' case, however, it was no more than might have been expected. He was educated as a violinist by Vleutemps and Joachim, received his first insight into the principles of conducting under the guidance of such interpretive giants as Richter and Lew, had personal contact with all the great musical figures of the last 40 years and has conducted concerts of his own for years in such important centers as London, Paris, Geneva, Amsterdam, Madrid, Rome and Milan.

His exposure to these great influences and traditions, combined with his own innate sensitiveness to beauty and its opposite in music, explains the successful resistance he has offered to the disease which has turned so many gifted musicians into stick-waving exhibitionists.

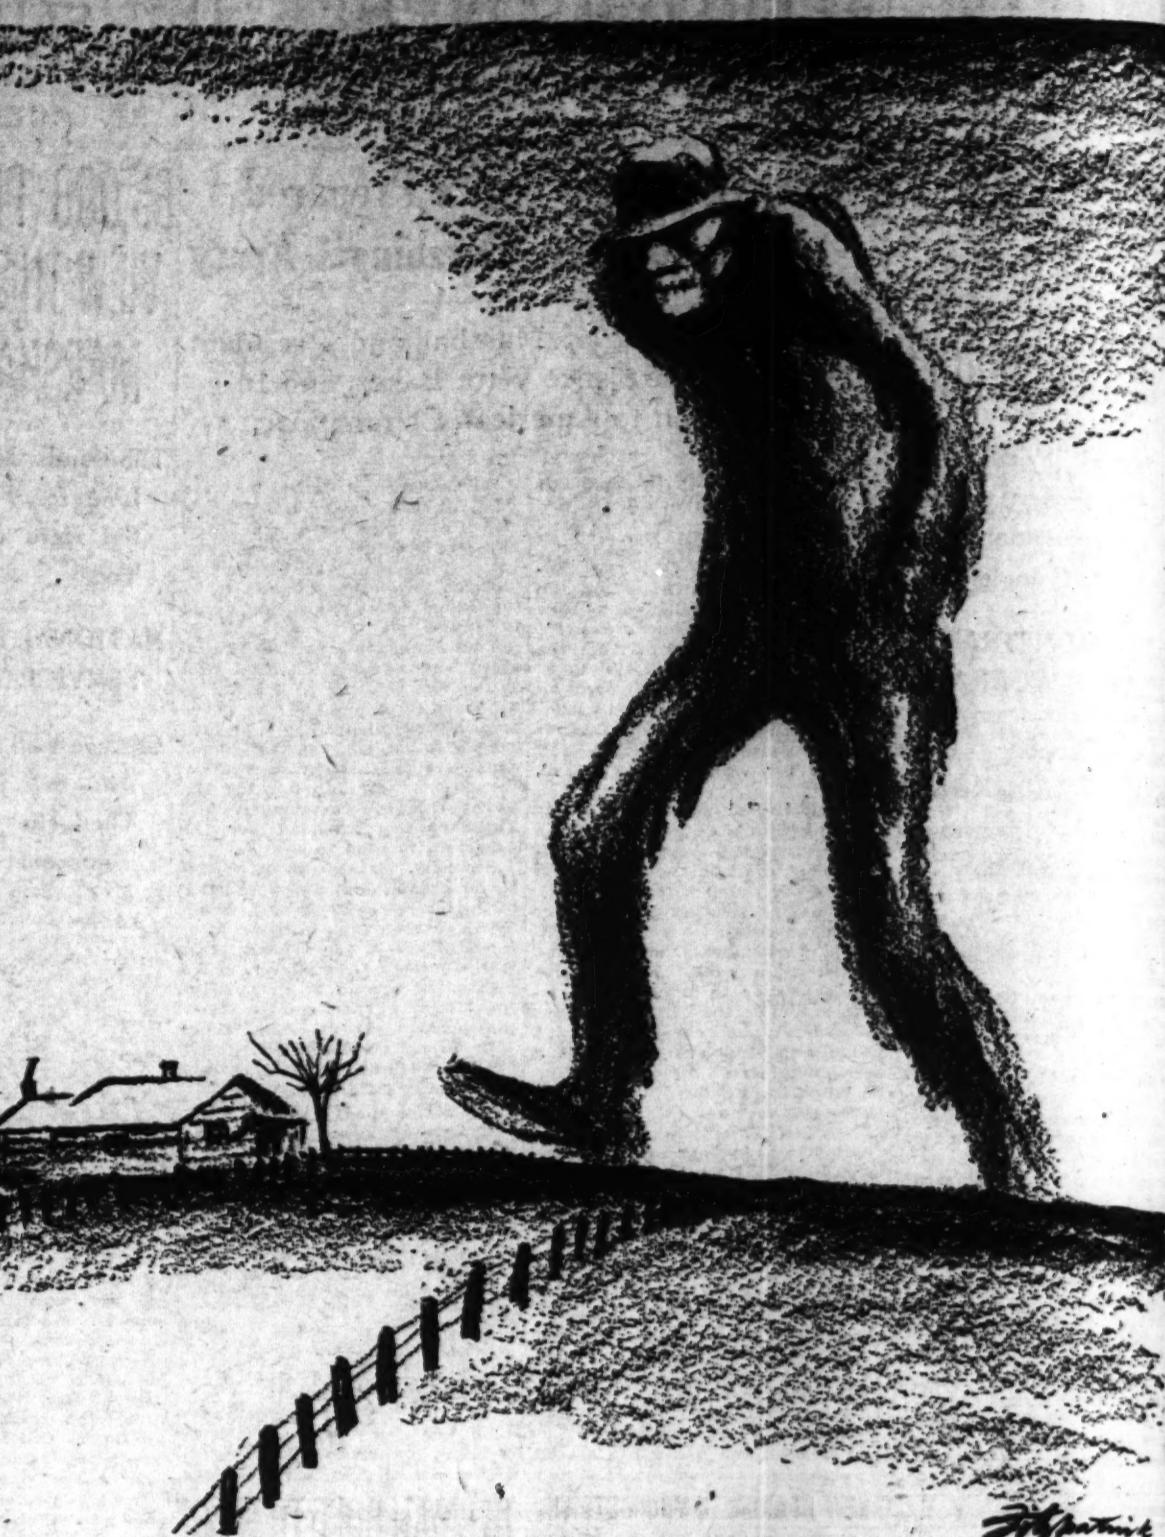

No musician who ever came to St. Louis has had a more stimulating or a more purifying influence on the musical values of the community.

ROCKING OKLAHOMA.

Though still young, Oklahoma has taken on many of the administrative vices of the older commonwealths. She has a multiplicity of departments, commissions, boards, etc., with the inevitable overlapping, confusion and superfluous employees for all of which the taxpayer pays and pays and pays. There has been no sustained executive effort to simplify the conduct of public affairs and supplant chaos with system, but Governor-elect Murray, according to report, will undertake the job which his predecessors have hesitated to tackle.

Still controversy attends him. There is the matter of his continuing to receive a salary on his university while on the pay roll of the Government.

On the board of the university paying the salary are several power magnates, and Dr. Wilbur handles power for the Government. A politician in such a position would

THE NEW ARKANSAS TRAVELER.

The Administration's Albatross

Ray Lyman Wilbur is fulfilling a prophecy that he would cause trouble; he is the center of several controversies, including the oil shale land charges, handling of Boulder Dam, presence of power magnates on Stanford University board; now women are in arms over his attitude toward the Children's Bureau.

The Gentleman at the Keyhole in Collier's.

WHEN Dr. Ray Lyman Wilbur was made Secretary of the Interior by President Hoover a California Republican and friend of the President remarked: "That man will get the administration into trouble." His remark was not explained and does not necessarily affect the Secretary's integrity; there are extremely honest men whom trouble attends like a shadow.

The prophecy, anyway, is being fulfilled. A Senate investigation of Mr. Wilbur's off activities is in progress. The power issue, the Federal Power Commission that has just been legislated out of office and partly through Dr. Wilbur's handling of Boulder Dam, is rising to harass the administration. The organized women of the country have become embittered against Dr. Wilbur, and a powerful newspaper, until recently rather friendly to the administration, is ready to attack him.

The recent child welfare conference in Washington has added the organized women of the country and the social workers generally to his list of foes. There have been three such conferences. The first one resulted in the creation of the Federal Children's Bureau. The second one was called by the Federal Children's Bureau. And the one just held was called, some say, to do away with the Federal Children's Bureau.

At any rate it speedily became apparent that this recent conference, largely managed by Dr. Wilbur, was inimical to Miss Grace Abbott, head of the Children's Bureau, and threatened the bureau's existence as an independent organization.

One notices as still in the Department of the Interior Dr. Wilbur the same lawyer who advised Fall. The oil land charges provoked an angry criticism of the World by President Hoover, who talked like a rightous man unfairly attacked.

One is naturally inclined to think well of Dr. Wilbur. He is unquestionably a man of intelligence and force. He is a university president, and educators are almost of the priestly class, so far as respectability is concerned. Besides, Ray Lyman shone so by contrast with his brother, Curtis D. Wilbur, of the Coolidge administration, that everyone gave three cheers when he arrived in Washington—a man of ideas and courage, perhaps the strong man of the Hoover administration.

Still controversy attends him. There is the matter of his continuing to receive a salary on his university while on the pay roll of the Government.

On the board of the university paying the salary are several power magnates, and Dr. Wilbur handles power for the Government. A politician in such a position would

Report on the New Currency

From the Baltimore Sun.

THE Treasury has been disappointed in its hope of reducing the cost of money circulation by reducing the size of paper money. The average life of the $1 and $5 bills has proved to be but a few days longer than that of the old bills. The $2 bill, owing, apparently, to the ancient superstition that it is accompanied by bad luck, stands up. The others become spoiled just as quickly and break just badly.

Blame for the prompt return of bills as unfit for use is put largely upon motor and garage employees, the nature of whose busi-

ONE MILLION reindeer in Alaska are dependent upon the Federal Government for protection, and noboddy in the Government wants to play Santa Claus. The Governor of Alaska has the job right now, but not because he asked for it. It was given to him last year by Secretary of the Interior, Dr. William John Cooper, who was then, ex-officio, chief reindeer herder. He had convinced Mr. Wilbur that such work was in no way related to educational research.

The Office of Education originally assumed charge of the animals in 1930 because of the seal of its general agent in Alaska at that time. The agent, Dr. Sheldon Jackson, thought it would be fine for the Eskimos to raise reindeer for food, clothing and transportation, and for the beasts, too, since Alaska possesses agricultural and climatic conditions favorable for reindeer raising.

DR. JACKSON first urged the Government to import the deer into the Territory, but Congress refused the necessary appropriations. Appeals were then made through the press, and sufficient funds were subscribed by the public for the importation of 15 deer. Dr. Jackson transported his charges 1,000 miles through a stormy sea and established them in their new home. The experiment was a huge success from the standpoint of both Eskimos and reindeer. The former got their food, clothing and transportation, and the latter prospered. How they prospered!

Possibly Dr. Jackson hadn't studied the life history of reindeer very closely and didn't realize that 15 deer might produce 1,000,000 descendants in 40 years. Certainly he couldn't have foreseen what complications would arise from the amazing growth of this infant industry. Recently Delegate Dan Sutherland of Alaska brought the matter before the House of Representatives.

Precious Heroism

OREE'S STORY: THE COMPLETE RECORD OF HIS POLAR FLIGHT. Edited by the Swedish Society for Anthropology and Geography. Translated from the Swedish by Edward Adams-Ray. (Viking Press, New York City, $5.)

URING the past fall a competent journalistic account of the Andree balloon adventure in the Arctic and the discovery of the party remains on White Island last August was rushed through the press evidently by way of realizing few honest dollars out of public interest in the matter before the official account with all the recitals should appear. Since the end of the tragic adventure is in the heroism revealed, the early account in book form served well enough for substantially all of those who were there. But those whose interest in the matter may persist for so long a period as several months, will be grateful for the official account now published in a wealth of realistic detail.

Those who may look upon the Andree story as a precious thing to be cherished, may be glad to have between covers for preservation this detailed account to the little word.

Furthermore, its position is unique in that Andree was the first to undertake polar exploration in a modern manner, and that years before the pole was reached by the Roche method. The only fault in lay in the fact that his dream, which has proved prophetic, was many jumps ahead of scientific thought.

The volume is divided into five parts as follows: In the first are brief biographies of the three adventurers; Andree, Strindberg and Frenkel; an account of the balloon flights, the planning of the great adventure and the operations of the same. In part two a complete narrative of the adventure is given as revealed by Andree's notes found on White Island, together with an article on the photographs of the Andree expedition.

The third part sets forth in full the story of the discovery of Andree's last camp. In part four various authorities discuss the scientific aspects of the expedition. Part five contains Andree's two series in so far as they can be deciphered: the marginal notes made by Strindberg on the calendar.

ANOTHER proposal to be made in the name of relieving unemployment will undoubtedly be an extension of Government ownership. Healthy and normal employment consists of serving another for his personal satisfaction or profit. As the Government is not personal, its proper business employment would be for those serving for its profit. Public works are on a different footing and need not be considered.

For the wage earners to benefit in time of general depression it would be necessary to assume that Government ownership would prevent the business in which it engaged.

Our largest Government business is the post office in which the receipts rise and fall extensively.

If it is assumed that payment of wages will go on without work, that is not employment, but relief. Then no one should work.

The Government has never shown much aptitude for real business. The Congress will not permit it to be conducted by a competent executive, but constantly intervenes. The most free, progressive and satisfactory method ever devised for the equitable distribution of property is to permit the people to manage themselves by conducting their own business. They have more wisdom than any government.

NEW YORK BOXING BOARD DETHRONES SCHMELING AS TITLEHOLDER

HIS DISBARMENT PAVES WAY FOR CHICAGO BOUT WITH STRIBLING

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 6.—The New York State Athletic Commission today decided to withdraw heavyweight championship recognition from Max Schmeling of Germany. At the same time the commission announced it would consider a match between Jack Sharkey and an outstanding opponent, preferably Young Stribling, as for the heavyweight title.

The commission announced the indefinite suspension of New York's Schmeling, as well as his manager, Joe Jacobs. Jacobs attended today's meeting together with William F. Carey, president of Madison Square Garden, in an effort to straighten out the tangled heavyweight program.

The disbarment of the German, who was recognized as the world's champion by the commission after he won on a foul from Sharkey here in June, now may pave the way for a program climaxed by a title match between Schmeling and Stribling in Chicago in June.

A $500,000 offer already has been received by Schmeling for this match and "Pete" Stribling has indicated readiness to close.

Meanwhile, Schmeling may find himself stripped altogether of title recognition in the United States, inasmuch as the National Boxing Association's poll on the subject already has indicated a substantial majority of member states in favor of declaring the German's title null and void.

The New York Commission's action against the German was taken after Jacobs refused to accept unconditionally a return title match with Sharkey here in June. Jacobs countered with a proposal that Stribling and Sharkey fight an elimination match in New York. This was turned down.

Despite the commission's objection to a Stribling-Sharkey contest as a preliminary, Chairman James A. Farley declared that Stribling, in effect, now was regarded as the outstanding title challenger and then specified that title recognition would be accorded the winner of a bout between the Georgian and the Boston Sailor.

The commission's action, which had been anticipated, may be followed by the completion of arrangements for Stribling to fight Primo Carnera, at Miami, Fla., late in February or early in March, as a preliminary to the proposed Stribling-Schmeling contest in Chicago. This would leave Sharkey out of consideration altogether in the mainistic events of 1931.

While in a disciplinary mood, the commission declared the middle-weight title vacated, following failure of Mickey Walker, the champion, to respond to an ultimatum demanding he manifest a willingness to defend the 160-pound crown. The N. B. A. declared Walker's title vacant in 1928.

The commission filed a challenge from Tuffy Griffiths, Chicago heavyweight, for a fight with Sharkey.

Stribling Accepts Schmeling Bout.

By the Associated Press.

MIAMI, Fla., Jan. 6.—"Pete" Stribling, father and manager of W. L. (Young) Stribling, announced today he had accepted terms to engage the Georgia challenger against Max Schmeling in Chicago in June. The fight will be a Chicago Mill Fund benefit, Pa. Stribling said.

"We'd rather fight for the National Boxing Commission in Chicago and meet Schmeling than meet Sharkey or any other contender in New York," Pa. Stribling continued.

"Regardless of the action of the New York City, Schmeling, I believe, still is generally recognized as the champion and no reason why we should not have a fight in New York, or elsewhere."

Stribling announced later he had reached Nate Lewis, Chicago promoter, by phone, and New York, and that he had promised Lewis he would go through with the June fight in Chicago.

The date is yet to be set, but it will be held at Soldier Field, he said he was informed.

Stribling will receive 12½ percent of the receipts, his father-manager said.

TOM MOYNAN, COACH AT NOTRE DAME, WED SECRETLY IN SEPTEMBER

By the Associated Press.

RAWLINS, Wyo., Jan. 6.—The secret marriage last September of Tim Moynihan, assistant football coach at Notre Dame University, and Miss Mabel Roach, Rawlins school teacher, was announced here today by Mrs. Moynihan.

The pair met while attending high school. Moynihan lived here with an aunt, Mrs. T. W. O'Hara, and graduated from the Rawlins High School in 1925.

He came here for a visit last fall while Miss Roach was teaching school. They decided to be married and on Sept. 6 went to Rock Springs, where the ceremony was performed, the football coach's wife said.

The marriage was kept a secret, and Mrs. Moynihan returned here to the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Roach. Her father is warden of the State penitentiary.

QUIT AS CHAIRMAN OF DAVIS CUP BODY

JOSEPH WEAR

WEAR TO RETIRE AS CHAIRMAN OF DAVIS CUP BODY

By the Associated Press.
NEW YORK, Jan. 6.—In an interview with the New York Times, printed today, Joseph W. Wear of Philadelphia, who is retiring as chairman of the Davis Cup Committee of the United States Lawn Tennis Association, declared himself opposed to any change in Davis Cup rules until the United States again shall become the defending cup-holder.

Louis B. Dailey, retiring president of the U. S. L. T. A. recently advocated a new Davis Cup regulation by which players would be eligible for the competition for not more than three or four years.

"Wear," Wear said, "that certain changes should be made in the play for the Davis Cup. Ever since I became chairman, the first Jack had authorized, was done."

At an time since 1928 Dempsey say

he agreed to fight Carnera, next summer, his share might be considerably more than that. If times were normal this match would draw $2,000,000 to Soldier Field.

Passed Up $300,000.

REPORTERS still ask Jack Dempsey if he intends to return to the ring. They can't understand how a fighter of Jack's punch and comparative youth can close his eyes to half a million dollars or more, to be had for a few minutes' buffeting.

Dempsey still smiles and kids them along; but he has steadfastly adhered to the statement he made to this writer at the Belmont Hotel, New York, the day of the Tunney-Hearn fight, that he was "definitely out" of the fight game and would not again enter the ring to compete." Jim Bottomley and Grover Alexander of the Cardinals were present when the first news of Primo's arrival came. Foreigners coming over to this country without proper credentials to do into the big money jackpot seldom anywhere. It was necessary to enter the port of New York under some sort of sponsorship; so the suave Walter Friedman sold Bill Duffy to Carnera's manager as the man to personally conduct Carnera's tour. Primo went over all right, somewhat handicapped by the reputation of his sponsor.

Now, however, Carnera needs no introduction. He is a great card anywhere. Miami wants him; Soldier Field is ready for him. New York would welcome him except for its obstinate committee.

The chances are that Carnera will be seen in Soldier Field, next summer, or possibly at Miami, next February. The situation is all up to Melrose Square. George and the New York commission. If the commission continues to be obstinate about both Schmeling and Carnera, it is highly probable that everybody will break away from New York and the center of big fight activities will shift to Chicago.

Both Tunney and Dempsey could have had a second fortune each by returning to the ring—Dempsey particularly. But in each case the ambition and necessity which launched them on their original careers have long since departed. Upheld stonily against fear of power, when it comes to fighting they naturally prefer to be spectators rather than actors.

Can't blame them, can you?

Not So Easy.

BUT Dempsey has turned down all offers. The reason was not age, for Jack is not old as Fitzsimmons, Jack Britton or some other fighters were when they held titles. It is that the pangs of training after a layoff of three years, the chance of suffering disfigurement, injury during the fight, and, worst of all, the loss of prestige through an inglorious defeat offset the thought of easy money.

Training for a Contract.

ABE RUTH is rowing and bicycling madly on Art McGovern's gymnasium apparatus, in New York, preparing to get his 255 pounds down to playing hardness by training camp time. Babe is 36 and the grime of adolescence is powerful at that age. Plenty of work is needed to keep excess fat in submission.

Ask Jack O'Connor—he knows.

When Jack was a baseball player he liked his beer. But Stein holding is not exercise and Jack usually took on plenty fat. But in each year of each year O'Connor started work to get into playing shape. He muffed himself in sweaters and did road work. He played handball. It was grueling work, but when time to go to Hot Springs arrived he was pretty much ready to start playing baseball.

O'Connor did it because he knew that playing under overstuffed conditions was no good. Ruth has a different incentive. It is $50,000 a year. Ruth is now on the last leg of his two-year record-breaking salary. Next year he must sign a new one and naturally he wants to keep his pay check as nearly to its present altitude as possible.

Dixon May Be Successor.

By the Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 6.—Joseph W. Wear of Philadelphia, who has been designated as chairman of the Davis Cup Committee of the United States Lawn Tennis Association, members of his family have disclosed here.

Pressure of business has forced Wear to decide against retaining the important committee post he has held since February, 1928. Not only is he established in private business, but is chairman of the Alumni Board of Yale University as well, and he no longer can find the necessary time to devote to Davis Cup affairs.

It was understood here that Wear would remain as his successor. Fitzsimmons Dixon of Philadelphia, nonplaying captain of the last two American Davis Cup teams, Dixon also is a member of the Davis Cup Committee.

The Agates increased their lead in the newspaper League to four games by winning three from the Forty-ninth States at Peterson's last night. The Agates compiled a total of 2321, with a high game of 1027, while the States got only 2552. Schwartz was the big gun for the league leaders, rolling 662. Piesbergan had 626.

The Green Sheets gained three games on the third-place Sport Specials by sweeping their series with the Specials. The winners shot 2755, with Bruns contributing 612, which included a 247 game. Bill Eifert shot 620 to lead the Specials.

The Bungles took the odd game from the Andy Gumps and the Intertypes, who washed the Orange Peels in the other matches. Jones led the Bungles with 585. Thabor, 597, and Stoddard 574, were high for the Intertypes.

Hockey Game Moved.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Jan. 6.—The Buffalo club of the American Hockey League will play its scheduled game with Kansas City at Hibbing, Minn., Wednesday and Saturday, instead of at St. Paul, it was announced here yesterday. The Buffs have been using the St. Paul rink for their home ice, but poor attendance here was given as the reason for the change.

The marriage was kept a secret, and Mrs. Moynihan returned here to the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Roach. Her father is warden of the State penitentiary.

To Serve Life Sentence at Hard Labor for Murder of Oil Station Man at Tyro.

By the Associated Press.

INDEPENDENCE, Kan., Jan. 6.—

Admitting the killing of John Siebel, 26-year-old Tyro (Kan.) filling station operator, in a holdup Dec. 5, Everett Haldiman, 17, faces life imprisonment at hard labor.

Haldiman pleaded guilty yesterday before District Judge J. W. Holden. Judge Holden specified that he would start his sentence at the state prison rather than serve at a reformatory until he became of age, saying he did not wish to "contaminate" the youths in the reformatory.

Willie Ray Harley, 17, Kansas City, was tried with Haldiman and two girl companions in Dallas, Tex., in connection with the slaying of Siebel and William Price, Kansas City bakery driver, shot Nov. 26, chose to stand trial here. Kansas City officers did not demand extradition of the group for prosecution in the Price slaying.

County officials said charges would be filed in Juvenile Court against the girls, Fern McNabb, Kansas City, and Althea Rush, Sioux City, Ia.

CONFESSES BANK HOLDUP
Robber Also Tells Where $31,000 Is Buried.

By the Associated Press
KANSAS CITY, Mo., Jan. 6.—Police today said that "Red" Alton had confessed participation in the robbery of the Interstate National Bank here Dec. 19 and disclosed that $31,000 of the loot taken was buried on Frank Alton's farm near Ulysses, Kan.

Alton was arrested in Kansas City some days after his brother,

ST. LOUIS POST-DISPATCH

Frank and Roy Johnson, were arrested in Garden City. All three were indicted on robbery charges by the county grand jury.

Ray (Duke) Williams returned to Kansas City from Wyoming yesterday in the holding. Police said one of the five suspects under arrest had confessed. They are Williams, Red Alton and Roy Johnson. Police now are searching for Clyde H. Nimerick, former convict named in the purported confessions.

VENUE CHANGE GRANTED IN 25 LENAMY FERRY SEWER CASES

Circuit Judge Deering of Potowmack named by Judge Mulley to Hold Hearings, Approves Motion.

Changes of venue were granted in 25 cases, in which property owners in the Lemay Ferry Sewer District filed exceptions to the commissioners' assessments of benefits and damages, after the cases had been called at Clayton today before Circuit Judge Deering of Potowmack, named by Judge Mulley to conduct the hearings.

More than 1100 cases have been filed and others are set for hearing Friday. John E. Mooney, president of the Taxpayers' Protective Association, representing the exceptors, said he would call a meeting of clients at the Hancock School, 9427 South Broadway, Thursday night, to determine if they wished also to take the hearings before another judge.

Mooney alleged prejudices in his application, asserting that the action of Judge Deering yesterday in awarding 25 cases for hearing today did not give his clients time to notify their witnesses. Judge Mulley had disqualified himself from hearing the cases, giving no reason for his action and declining to comment.

BARRY, ILL., BANK CLOSES
Directors' Order Follows Heavy Withdrawals.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

PITTSFIELD, Ill., Jan. 6.—The Barry State Bank of Barry, Ill., did not open this morning, by order of the directors, and the State Banking Department was notified to take charge.

For some time the bank has had a steady withdrawal of deposits, and the directors' action was taken to protect depositors. The last statement of the Barry bank, Sept. 24, showed deposits of $251,000. John O. Strubinger is president and J. H. Jones cashier.

GOLF BALL RETRIEVING BIDS

City Rejects Highest Offer of $4655 for Privilege.

Bids for the city contract for retrieving golf balls from water hazards at Forest Park were received today by the Department of Public Welfare.

The best bid, that of Hyman Greenston, who offered the city $4655 for the privilege, was rejected because his check accompanying the bid was drawn on a St. Louis bank instead of a St. Louis depository. The next bid was made by Henry F. Price, 6418 Spencer place, who offered $4212. Two other bids, $4001 and $3650, were received.

ERMINE Steps Out Again

Three types of ermine or bunny evening wraps worn by the smartest women.

By ANN ROBERTS

PUTTING down the glass she was wiping, she turned the page and began to read it slowly because she always had difficulty reading English.

A poor bum like Tony couldn't have been mixed up with a swell like Ross Dugan, unless he tried to rob her, and the guy that did the killing hadn't robbed her, so it couldn't be Tony.

When she'd finished the story she sat back for a time thinking about it. A couple of niggers came in for gin and she gave it to them and when they left again she resumed her leisurely reading and came upon the story of "Lucky Sam." Lipshitz, and then she saw everything clearly.

According to the handsomest

one very handsome and very new all black wrap is made of black broadcloth over stiff Lyons velvet. It is a wide cape with a standing collar that flares about the face for a stiffish frame that is most important looking and becoming.

Other extremely handsome black ones are trimmed with sable. One has a shortish cape of flying squirrel in a deep beige tone.

Everywhere you go now where smart people are gathered together you will find black and white wraps as well as the black ones and those of all white fur. These with entire tops of white fur are a little lower looking than those with white fur at the cuffs, and they certainly manage to be about as becoming as anything that is being worn in the evening.

Wraps that are made of ermine or bunny are of short, three-quarter or seven-eighths length. Their prices run all the way from the thousands down to $25.50 so that anyone who goes out of an evening can afford one within the limits of their own particular budget.

Capes help to make them graceful and becoming—longish capes that slide over the arms and back in lovely, flattering lines. And the sleeves often are short for the simple reason that long gloves being worn in the evening costume are part of the evening costume.

It was Tony killed "Lucky Sam" and "Lucky Sam" belongs to Dave the Slapper's gang and the gang had found out where Tony was and they'd come to get him and they wouldn't go away until he was dead or some of his gang came to help him and then there'd be shooting in the street outside and maybe inside the hotel, too, and then she saw everything clearly.

According to the handsomest

one her mind. He looked worse than ever and the bloodshot eyes were insane. She stopped in the middle of the floor and waited for him. He came up to her and said,

"Listen. You gotta do something for me."

She wasn't afraid of any man, but she saw that this thing with the bloodshot eyes wasn't a man, but something that was insane and not human, so she said, "I seen. I ain't got to do anything for anybody."

"You gotta send a note."

She saw suddenly that it was not altogether because he was hungry for coke that he acted like this. He'd seen Dave the Slapper and the others waiting outside. He was white and shaking. She'd never seen scared before, but never as bad as this. It made her feel a little sick. A man like that might do anything, so she said, "Well, what's you want me to do?"

He promised her everything, money, protection, trade, even jewelry, which made her laugh, and when he'd finished she said, "All right. Go on upstairs and hide again."

He looked at her again fearfully. "You're gonna do it right away, ain't you?"

She grinned at him and said,

"Sure, right away," and when he disappeared through the door she still stood grinning and looking after him. She hated that kind of a little rat.

When he went inside again she noticed that it was almost noon and as she turned to go into the kitchen to see if everything was ready, she saw Tony coming in.

"Ten," she observed gently, "

Talks to PARENTS

By Alice Judson Beck

Frederick's Case

FREDERICK is infelicitous far in advance of his age. He also is exceptionally large, well grown and naturally muscular.

Yet in spite of his size and strength, there is something decidedly effeminate about him.

His pink and white skin, his manner of speech, his habits, all give the impression of a personality which is indecisive and retiring. He has no friends save a cousin of his own age.

During the winter months he spends his leisure in reading and experimenting with batteries and wires.

In summer he likes going on long hikes in the woods and rowing or boating on the lake. He swims and dives beautifully.

But even then he plays with no one except his favorite cousin. Once or twice he has become fighting mad. Then he has struck out and laid his opponent low to his own great surprise. But for the most part he accepts gibes and teasing without bothering to be annoyed.

It is obvious that as a man in a competitive world Frederick is bound to encounter certain difficulties. What can his parents do to prepare him for these?

They can give him every opportunity for increased contact with other children. They can accept his limitations and help him to develop his assets. Obviously, he should receive the benefit of higher education and be permitted to choose his own career. Very likely he will elect an intellectual profession.

Probably, too, since he is not a competitive, acquisitive type, he never will make much money.

His parents need to school themselves to accept this possibility so that they will not cause him to feel that he is a misfit and a failure simply because his ambitions do not coincide with the convention idea of success.

Cool Them First.

Let all foods cool thoroughly before placing them in the refrigerator.

Not only do warm dishes cause the ice to melt wastefully, but the keeping qualities of the food will be destroyed.

Vests Gain Importance In the New Paris Styles

VESTS are becoming matters of increasing importance at Paris.

Sometimes vests of flat fur,

such as galak or breitachwanz,

are worn with tailleur, while sports suits often display Jersey vests of contrasting color.

A gray Jersey model has a vest of dark green jersey, fashioned in pointed design.

"It sounds lovely," she sighed and looked with a shudder of distaste at the snow thudding against the tall, cold windows of the office which overlooked crowded Broadway. "But—"

She shrugged her shoulders and ran a listless hand over the keys of her typewriter.

"I didn't thank you properly for the flowers," she said to Lorrimer, after a slight pause. "In that note I sent you. It was very thoughtful of you to send them."

H E waved his stammered thanks.

"This is no day for you to be out. If I send my car to the office at closing time will you do me the honor to drive home in it?"

"Thank you," she said gratefully. "But I couldn't. I can get into the subway from the building and I won't have any difficulty getting home."

"But the bad air and the crowds—people with more grippe and cold germs than one could count—aren't at all good for you," he argued quite gravely, yet as one speaks to a friendly child. "And I cannot afford to lose my best typist."

But she shook her head at him and then seeing Mrs. Sampson coming toward them, turned reluctantly back to her machine.

But after Lorrimer had left she found herself dreaming over the black and white keys.

South—and ocean winds and a golden sun! South and a round island singing and happy hours on a tiled veranda! The great vines covering the stone of the house and somewhere a bird singing . . . what a picture and one she thought . . . that she would never see.

When she left the office that evening, wondering if her tired body could carry her down the subway stairs, wondering if she could endure to stand, swaying and jostled and breathless and bruised, in the packed train, she found Lorrimer at the office building entrance to the tube.

"Please forgive me," he urged. "For forcing myself upon you, but you really worry me. And I claim the right of a friend to urge you to change your mind about using my car. I'll go along on you don't mind. I have an engagement in Brooklyn. You can drop me off at the Bossert on the heights—please don't be foolish and stubborn enough to refuse."

H IS voice was caressing, yet it still held that quality of tone with which one speaks to a child. The Bossert engagement was manufactured for the occasion but he might as well eat there as anywhere else, and he had good friends—artists—on Columbia Heights.

Betty was far too tired, far too weak and ill to refuse his offer again. She murmured something which he took for assent and the next moment he had taken her arm and was guiding her out of the building. She had just a glimpse of a white whirr and a taste of snow and wind on her face before she found herself in a great car, sinking back against the upholstery with a correct and amiable chauffeur tucking a squirrel robe around her knees.

Anson got in beside her, adjusted the windows, asked her permission and lighted a cigarette and leaned back regarding her with quizzical amusement, as the big machine purred evenly through the streets on its way to the Bridge.

"Very, thank you."

She closed her eyes and a deeper shade of weariness passed over her face. Lorrimer regarded her with alarm.

"I say, you are all in. You really should not come back to the office for a few days . . . You came back far too soon as it is."

She was too tired to have any reserves with him. She felt that he was her friend.

The Worker's Health—III.

He tired business man is presumed, but evidently his alleged fatigue doesn't seriously impair his constitution.

Compared with the typical american, the average business man makes a good showing as a typical American. This was reported by the research division of the Milbank Memorial Fund, from physical examinations records of 60,000 native-born adult males.

Lumping together their various inabilities for all age groups, it was found that the skilled trade division showed the highest prevalence of physical defects and disabilities, while the professional group had the lowest prevalence.

The business man has better teeth and gums than the farmer, and he has fewer defects of the respiratory tract than either.

Contrary to the stage picture of the highly irritable business man,

he was found to be comparatively free from nervousness, dizziness and back-ache—and he is no more susceptible to defects or illnesses of the digestive system than is the average person.

Curiously, however, it was found that more business men than farmers are users of patent medicines.

The most serious disabilities which the business group was known to be suffering from were those affecting the heart and the circulatory system.

There was a high prevalence in the business group of defects of the valves of the heart, and abnor-minal changes in the heart muscle.

Slight and moderate thickening of the arteries was another com-

CHAPTER SEVEN.

WHEN Betty was up and around again and still as weak as a kitten from the long fever, she insisted, despite the doctor's orders, on going back to work. Mrs. Sampson spared her all that was possible and Anson Lorrimer lounged in on her first day at the office and looked with real alarm at her pallor and thinness. Yet she was, in a strange way, prettier than ever. Her violet-blue eyes in the extreme whiteness of her face were startlingly lovely and the shadows of illness and weariness lay beneath them on the creamy transparent skin like bruises on a gardenia. Her face was much thinner and all the beautiful modeling of its contours was noticeable.

"You shouldn't have come back so soon," he told her reproachfully. She smiled at him, wanly.

"I had to. And I hate sitting around and being fed egg-nog," she answered in a voice that shook slightly from weakness.

"I wish I could catch you up and carry you off South," he told her, and his friendly, yet impersonal tone seemed to rob words of any suggestive quality. "I'd like to establish you on the veranda of some little red-roofed Spanish house, with a fountain singing in the patio and a bird singing in the bougainvillea vines. You'd need a tropic sun and a cool ocean breeze to bring back the color to your boy."

"It sounds lovely," she sighed and looked with a shudder of distaste at the snow thudding against the tall broad windows of the office which overbooked crowded Broadway."But . . ."

The shrug over her shoulders and the listless hand over the keys of her typewriter.

"I didn't thank you properly for the flowers," she said to Lorrimer, after a slight pause, "in that note I sent you. It was very thoughtful of you to send them."

He waved her stammered thanks aside.

"This is no day for you to be out. If I send my car to the office at closing time will you do me the honor to drive home in it?"

"Thank you," she said gratefully. "But I couldn't. I can get into the subway from the building and I won't have any difficulty getting home."

"But the bad air and the crowds—people with more grippe and cold germs than one could count—aren't all good for you," he argued quite gravely; yet as one speaks to a friendly child, "and I cannot afford to lose my best typist."

But she shook her head at him and then seeing Mrs. Sampson coming towards them, turned reluctantly back to her machine.

After Lorrimer had left she found herself dreaming over the black and white keys.

"South—an ocean winds and a golden sun! South and a round sun singing and lay hours on a tiled veranda! The great vines covering the stones of the house and somewhere a bird singing . . . just a picture and one she thought . . . that she would never see."

After a long silence he asked her lightly, to tell him something about her family. She did so—in broken, halting sentences, almost indifferently. The girls and her mother seemed so far away at that moment. All she was conscious of was of the ease of movement with which the one was carrying her, of the feeling of the upholstery, of the warmth and luxury of the great beautiful rug over her knees.

Somehow Anson, who was imaginative and sensitive enough, learned a very great deal about Betty's circumstances and struggles. Much more than she uttered in words for she said, actually, very little.

Betty was not an absolute villain, few men—but he was quite devoid of any fine altruistic feelings, with which one speaks to a child. The Bossert engagement was manufactured for the occasion but he might as well eat there as anywhere else, and he had good friends—artists—on Columbia Heights.

Betty was far too tired, far too weak and ill to refuse his offer again. She murmured something which he took for assent and the next morning had taken her to the Bossert, who had just a glimpse of a white whirl and a taste of snow and wind on her face before she found herself in a great car, sinking back against the upholstery with a content and amiable chauffeur tucking a squirrel robe around her knees.

Anson got in beside her, adjusted the windows, asked her permission and lighted a cigarette and leaned back, regarding her with quizzical amusement, as the machine purred evenly through the streets on its way to the Bridge.

"Comfortable?"

"Very, thank you."

She closed her eyes and a deeper shade of weariness passed over her face. Lorrimer regarded her with alarm.

"I say, you are all in. You really should not come back to the office for a few days until you came back far too soon as it is."

She was too tired to have any reserves with him. She felt that he was her friend.

swell immediately if existing laws were relaxed, but asserts that such a ballot is a fallacy.

"Sweden, which permits divorce by mutual consent, now has a much lower divorce rate than America," he writes.

Theodore Dreiser goes Mr. Russell one better. Under the heading, "Modern Marriage Is a Farce," he declares that the laws and customs on marriage and divorce are inhuman and advocates the Russian system of easy divorce upon the Russian as opposed to our own marriage and divorce system. I can only wish that the Russian system could apply. Only since without changing our methods of government it cannot, I do suggest a more liberal marriage and divorce law campaign."

WARWICK DEEPING, author of many a sentimental novel, takes a different tack in his discourse. Although admitting that divorce is desirable in some cases, he believes that the majority of marriages could be made successful with the use of a little perseverance on the part of the persons involved.

He sums up his views with:

"If we believe that marriage is somehow sacred, we can say that life is not right or fair. I do not believe that marriage is bankrupt. I believe this period of ours is one of those seasons of questioning and of stress through which we shall come to a finer conception of comradeship. The contract grows broader, more fair, more full of understanding.

"It seems to some of us that those who shout for freedom, for the right to be happily promiscuous, are asking us to discard the very inhibitions that make of life something more than a long sex game."

H. G. Wells avers that he has, until now, carefully avoided the divorce subject because he hates the thought of it. He believes it to be a thoroughly inhuman institution but he also believes such matters to be but little of the state's business.

"We credit our laws with too much power in these matters. I wish to give divorces to application of either party as the only sure cure. He writes in conclusion:

"There is today positively no figuring the legal, social, financial,

political and other combinations

or worse that can arise to bedevil

the man or woman who, having entered upon marriage, is either courageous or foolish enough to seek to be free again.

"Personally, I am not yet prepared to wish for Communism in toto but when I contemplate the sheer misery of getting divorced

it seems to me that it is not worth the effort."

A musical instrument in which sound is created by use of radio tubes will be heard for the first time in the United States when it is played by Maurice Marstenot, the inventor, in a Philco Symphony Concert over KMOX from 8:30 to 9 o'clock. Vibrations are produced in vacuum tubes and passed through a diffuser to a speaker, subject to intermediate modulation by the performer.

The new instrument can mimic most instruments in an orchestra and has also a tone of its own. In appearance it resembles a spinet. The small, flat desk-like cabinet has a keyboard of five octaves. Inside are vacuum tubes. A sensitized wire, extending across the keyboard, is held between the operator's thumb and second finger and is manipulated to produce pitch. The keyboard serves as a guide so that the intonation is always exact.

Chairman Woods of President's Group Tells Senators Lowest Period Is Likely This Month and Next.

IMPROVEMENT LIKELY TILL SPRING

Projects to the General Feeling in Industry in Country That Periods of Depression Are Inevitable

Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, Jan. 7.—Chairman Woods of the Hoover Committee on Employment estimated today before the Senate Appropriations Committee that there are between 4,000,000 and 5,000,000 unemployed in the United States. Unemployment has been increasing, he testified, saying he did not believe the situation would improve until spring.

There is altogether too much," he said, "and the way in which this unemployment comes out does not speak well for industry. There has been a general feeling in this country that periods of depression are inevitable. They not and should not be regarded as inevitable."

Woods said he believed the low-period concerning employment was likely to be felt this month next. He said the special committee to be made the middle of the month should show things at their first.

"Intolerable Situation." Requested by Senators to state what could be done, Col. Woods said his Employment Committee had been asked to assist the different localities and set up enough machinery for employment.

"The important thing is not to want the unemployed," Woods continued, "but to do something for them. It is an intolerable situation and one entirely foreign to our ideals."

The action of President Hoover calling industrial and labor leaders here a year ago was said to have aided and since there has been a minimum of labor disturbances. To extraordinary extent wage scales had been maintained, he said, adding, "The main thing is to get a man a job. Relief is secondary, if the man has a job he can care for himself."

Woods praised the spirit of cooperation throughout the nation, declaring every organization, government and community was joining in help.

Signs of a New View.

Asked what could be done, he said some measures confronting the Senate. He asked for legislation to put "red tape" involved in getting public works into operation. Senator Copeland (Dem., N.Y.), joined him.

"The think that impresses me," continued Woods, "is the different kind of industrial thought. In the days the first thing that managers of business did when these orders arrived was to trim their tails and discharge their employees. Now we find coming into industry a wholly different attitude. We find business men trying to help employees and if some must be discharged we find them using judicious laying off the single men and those who can stand it best and trying to help those who are laid off. It is not yet characteristic of industry, but there are signs of new view."

Transients Big Problem.

"This is the sort of a situation—the present one—that we cannot permit to go on. Ultimately it is a menace to our society. The danger is well off, but we have the warning."

As for relief, Woods said he regarded that as the prime duty of the localities and of the neighbors. He said he had found the people generally eager to help. The big problem, he added, was in transients.

While communities might be able to care for their own, they could not always meet demands for relief arising from transients.

Senator Hayden (Dem., Arizona) and Bratton (Dem., New Mexico), said the transient problem was one which particularly affected Southwestern States with their warmer climates.

Woods estimated that $2,500,000,000 in public works is planned. Of this amount, he said, about $1,000,000,000 is just at the point where work is about to begin. To get this work to the "pick-and-shovel stage" is receiving the attention of Woods' committee.

He said there was a prospect of the expenditure of $200,000,000 by
